War Contract Graft Probe Resolution Given House

Move Puts "Teeth" in Study of Bidding and Profits.

'Air Trust' Charge Precedes Proposal

Inferior Aircraft Held Bought; Boeing Aid Outlines Profits.

A resolution empowering the House Military Affairs Committee to "investigate profiteering and irregularities involving expenditure by the War Department of public funds for the National defense," was introduced yesterday by Representative McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina.

"Allegations and charges of a serious nature," which the committee, of which McSwain is chairman, has heard at secret and public hearings during the past fortnight, led to the request for action by the House to put "teeth" into the inquiry.

If the McSwain resolution is approved by the Rules Committee and passed by the House, Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, will head the special committee which will conduct the investigation.

The sum of $3,000, which may be increased to $10,000 if the additional funds are found necessary, will be asked for investigators who will assist the committee in inquiring into:

Engines, Planes, Bases, in Probe.

"Profiteering in aircraft and aircraft engines;

"Leasing of public property by the War Department to private concerns under terms and conditions alleged to be contrary to the public interest;

"Profiteering in the purchase of War Department property;

"Awarding of contracts without competitive bidding; and

"Methods of purchase of military aircraft under which the aircraft purchased is inferior to that of other powers."

Charges made by Capt. James V. Martin, aviation pioneer, that an "air trust" controls the sale of aircraft to the Army and Navy, and that only 25 cents of each dollar spent by the Government goes into the planes for which the money is appropriated, apparently formed one of the bases for the McSwain resolution.

A sub-committee questioned Martin in secret for more than six hours last Thursday.

It was also apparent that considerably more than Martin's sweeping charges lay behind McSwain's request yesterday.

Questions of profiteering in purchase of War Department property, and the possibility that aircraft to be acquired through newly instituted methods of open bidding might prove inferior to that of foreign powers, hinted at in the resolution, pointed in quite a different

Coal Mining Deadlock Ends

Pact Affecting 5,000 in Pennsylvania Is Announced.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 20 (AP).—Thomas Moses, president of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., today announced a treaty with heads of the United Mine Workers of America, ending a disagreement over contracts existing since the "captive" mine strikes of last summer.

The pact grants the check-off of union dues—long a source of conflict in southwestern Pennsylvania's coal fields—insures an "open shop" and immediately affects about 5,000 diggers at nine "captive" pits.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the union, who with John L. Lewis and other U. M. W. A. chiefs was elected by a minority of the Frick miners to represent them as collective bargaining agents, hailed the treaty as "a signal victory."

The agreement contains the same wage rates as the Appalachian coal code and expires with the termination of the coal code on March 31. Murray expressed hope a similar contract would be renewed at that time.

"An eight-hour day and the five-day week shall prevail," the agreement specifies.

$200,000 Fire Razes Plant in Clarksburg

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.). Causing a loss of approximately $200,000, fire of undetermined origin today destroyed the plant of the Parr Lumber & Planing Mill Co here. C. E. Parr, company head, said $50,000 insurance was carried.

Three mills and all but one of a series of warehouses and shops extending along the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad were destroyed. Firemen saved the adjoining plant of the Hazel Atlas Glass Co.

Swedish King Disowns Heir in Film Romance

Royal House Loses Fight to Avert Second Marriage With Commoner as Crown Prince's Son, Movie Director Incognito, Refuses to Give Up Actress.

Berlin, Feb. 20 (AP).—Prince Sigvard, Duke of Uppland, second son of the Crown Prince of Sweden and now a movie director, was disowned tonight by the Royal House of Sweden for refusing to give up the girl he loves.

It was announced that King Gustav and the young prince's father opposed his marriage to Fraulein Erika Patzek, daughter of a Berlin businessman, who is an actress in the studios of the U. F. A. Film Co. here.

Swedish news agencies were instructed by the Royal House tonight to release the following statement:

"The Swedish News Agency has been authorized to state that Prince Sigvard, second son of the crown prince, arrived at London recently and there made preparations to marry a woman of German nationality. The prince took this step against the expressed will of the King and the crown prince. Prince Sigvard was born in 1907."

The prince has been working as a director for the UFA company several years under an assumed name.

Efforts to reach the prince and his bride-to-be were unavailing. Servants at the Patzek home said the family was away at the country estate.

It is reported here the young couple intend to go to London soon for the marriage.

This will be the second time a member of the Swedish royal family has married a commoner.

Prince Lennart Bernadotte, son of Prince William, second son of King Gustav, was married in London in 1932 to Karin Nissavandt, daughter of a Stockholm industrialist.

The royal family objected and the prince was shorn of his title, including the right to inherit the crown.

He took the loss of his title lightly as he became plain "Mr. Bernadotte."

Mrs. Bernadotte gave birth to a daughter in June, 1933.

Mail Opened Here, Brown Tells Probe

Letters Received Since He Testified Tampered, He Declares.

By Martha Dalrymple.

Charges that mail from Washington addressed to his New York office had been opened were made by former Postmaster General Brown yesterday.

The charge was made as Brown, a witness before the Senate Air-mail Investigating Committee, reached a measure of agreement about just exactly what the "spoils conferences" of 1930 were.

Brown said that three letters addressed to him had been opened.

"I think I know who is responsible," he said.

Committee members said that neither they nor investigators had ever tampered with any of Brown's mail.

In connection with the alleged "spoils conferences," Black repeatedly pressed Brown to admit that the purpose of the meetings of air-transport operators was to make recommendations on which Brown would be guided in his award of mail contracts, extensions or route certificates. Brown long held his ground.

He maintained that the meetings were called to determine which companies had pioneer rights in certain routes. His final definition seemingly satisfied Black for the moment:

"The recommendations that resulted from these meetings were merely to show me the pioneer equities of certain lines which should probably be observed if any further subletting were agreed upon."

And there the matter rested.

Since the beginning of his air-mail investigation, Black has contended that at these meetings the air-mail map was divided up before the contracts were awarded. It was largely on the basis of evidence concerning the conferences that the Postoffice Department ordered its sweeping air-mail contract cancellation two weeks ago.

Brown told the committee how

Nitrate Movement Arouses Comment

Cristobal, C. Z., Feb. 20 (AP).—A sharp increase in the number of the ships passing through the Panama Canal carrying nitrate from Chile to Europe aroused comment today among marine officials because of the tense European situation.

The total tonnage of nitrate—usable in the manufacture of explosives—to pass through the canal this month reached 93,604 when the twelfth ship of the month passed through today.

Half the shipments were consigned to the Azores for orders. Shipping officials said the cargoes will be rerouted from those islands to England and Russia. France also was said to be buying large amounts of nitrate.

Ten Women Are Cremated In Home Fire

Heroic Nurse Saves Five, Flames Take Blind and Infirm.

Brookville, Pa., Feb. 20 (AP).—A 50-year-old wooden infirmary burned today, taking the lives of ten aged women while a night nurse raced through smoke and flames in an heroic attempt to rescue her charges.

Five of the less infirm were saved.

Within half an hour nothing remained of the annex to the Pennsylvania Memorial Home but smoking ruins.

The bodies of nine of the women, some of whom were blind, were found in their charred beds. The tenth had tried to reach the outside.

The dead: Mrs. Lena Sutley, 75; Mrs. Jenny Showers, 94; Miss Mida Crampton, 65; Miss Martha Moore, 74; Miss Margaret Perry, 76; Miss Mary Marvin, 81; Mrs. Elizabeth Loveland, 76; Miss Christie Bobst, 64; Mrs. Florence Roberts, 86, and Mrs. Mary Gannon, 80.

The flames, of undetermined origin, were discovered in a washroom by Night Nurse Ella Hulings at 1 a. m. She gave an alarm, but before firemen could arrive the one-story, 18-room building was enveloped. Fire hose froze in the 18-below-zero cold.

Mrs. Hulings made frantic efforts to rouse the 15 inmates, but found herself unable to reach most of the beds.

She succeeded in leading three of the women to safety by the time help arrived. In one room she found its inhabitant already dead—apparently of fright.

Apiarists Given Right to Put Bee On Uncle Sam!

Under the euphemistic name of "apiarists," the keepers of bees yesterday took their place along with the railroads, banks, insurance companies and other giants of industry and finance when the Senate made them eligible to borrow from the RFC.

The bill including apiarists among the eligible borrowers of RFC millions was sponsored by Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, although the latter in his measure specified the bee-keepers as "apiarians." The Senate Banking and Currency Committee looked the word up in Webster and found it was an adjective. "Apiarists" was given as the noun, so the change was made.

The measure must get House approval. The proposed loans will be made through the RFC regional agricultural credit corporations.

Mother-in-Laws' Day Is Set March 5; Blue Monday, Too!

Amarillo, Tex., Feb. 19 (AP).—Mother-in-law's day is the latest addition to the calendar. It will be observed here Monday, March 5.

The slogan is:

"A mother-in-law is a mother who has made good."

Some of Amarillo's prominent matrons, encouraged by Gene A. Howe, newspaper publisher, have organized the Mother-in-Law's Day Club of Texas.

"We mothers-in-law too long have borne the brunt of harsh jokes and misleading insinuations," Mrs. N S Griggs, the club's president, declared today. "It is time the public paid us some respect."

She explained the slogan thus:

"Any woman can be a mother, but a mother-in-law is one who has brought up her daughters in such a way that they want to marry and make homes and who have enough appeal that men want to marry them. We honor our mothers when many times their real problems don't begin until their children are married, so why not pay a little tribute to mothers-in-law?"

Amarillo will honor them in a big way. The mayor will issue a proclamation calling for city-wide observance. There will be flowers, a free show at the leading theater, favors from business houses, and prizes for the oldest and youngest, the prettiest, and the one with the most married children.

Johnson Hits Post's Series On New Deal

"The New Dealers," giving "the low-down on the higher-ups" of the Administration, will be found today on Page 3.

NRA Administrator Hugh S. Johnson went on the radio over a Nation-wide hook-up last night to attack, without naming it, the "New Dealers" series now running in The Post, with the statement that it was written by someone with "more than a trace of rodent blood" and published by a "dying newspaper."

Gen. Johnson was discussing NRA critics in an address generally devoted to the code authority conferences soon to be held in Washington, through which, he said, the Administration hopes to correct "all of the codes for the cure of every just complaint."

"We have sought and entreated criticism of our methods and results," he declared. "Much of it has been useful and has borne fruit, but a greater part has sped dying and fallen dead.

"Of late, lacking little in substance—at least little that could be proved or demonstrated — professional criticism has degenerated into scurrilous and personal appraisements of and assaults on officials. A conspicuous recent instance is by a writer who dared not sign his name to his strictures and advanced as a reason the astonishing statement that these men are his friends and that if they knew that it was he who was assailing their reputations he might lose their regard.

"Throws Mud at Strong."

"With a little less than libel, a trifle more than backstairs gossip, this writer in whose veins there must flow something more than a trace of rodent blood, exalts some who are weak and throws mud at some who are strong, for no other apparent reason than to provide saleable copy.

"All this is published by a dying newspaper, recently purchased at auction by an Old Dealer—a cold-blooded reactionary—who was one of the principal guides along the road to the disaster of 1929. And the object of its purchase must have been to attack men for the purpose of destroying measures."

"'By their fruits ye shall know them,'" he went on, "and these are the Dead Sea apples of envy, futility and frustration. They are financed and procured by sharp-shooting interests of the Old School, who never used the cream, shrewdly skimmed from the efforts of other men, to produce results constructive for the public good. They are produced at this behest and for these shekels by some mercenary character—assassin firing, masked, from ambush without the courage common to 90 per cent of men to step out into the open and meet his adversary eye to eye."

Gen. Johnson declared that NRA has operated in a "gold fish bowl" and that at no stage has it obscured its actions or repelled criticism.

"It now inaugurates a Field Day for criticism from anyone who has

$4,000,000 Given To NRA by Ickes

Total Since Organization in June Is $6,000,000.

An additional $4,000,000 for administrative expenses of the National Recovery Administration was allotted yesterday from public works funds by Administrator Ickes. This makes a total of $6,000,000 turned over to the NRA, the first $2,000,000 having been allotted when the Recovery Administration was organized last June.

At the same time, Ickes allotted $250,000 to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This money will be used for administration of codes under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The allotments were withdrawn from a $10,000,000 fund earmarked for emergency administration expenses.

House Bloc Forces Cash Bonus Vote

145 Sign Petition for Patman Bill; Veto Awaits It.

By Robert C. Albright

Over the emphatic opposition of President Roosevelt and a warning from Speaker Rainey, 145 members of the House yesterday forced a showdown on immediate cash payment of the $2,400,000,000 soldiers' bonus.

The vote will come March 12, and Administration forces already are at work to stop the veterans' snowball.

Speaker Rainey predicted the bill will never pass the House over Mr. Roosevelt's opposition, but spokesmen for the veterans' bloc foresaw an easy victory.

A last-minute rush of 18 members to sign the bonus petition a few minutes after the House convened yesterday brought signees to the 145 total required to compel a vote.

The last 14 names were attached in the face of admonition from Speaker Rainey that the President disapproved.

Opposed By President

Returning from a White House conference, the Speaker called newspapermen into his office.

"I have been authorized by the President to say that this is not the time to pay the bonus, and that he cannot approve any legislation to that effect," he said.

Less than an hour later, Representative Roy E. Ayers (Democrat), Montana, added the final signature needed to make the petition operative.

Signing the petition, based on the old Patman bill, which passed the House last session but was stopped in the Senate, were 97 Democrats, 43 Republicans and five Farmer-Laborites.

Although the House leadership clearly was not elated over prospect of another bonus vote, they professed little doubt the bill would be stopped in the Senate, even if it passes the House. In the remote possibility both Houses approved, leaders said a Presidential veto would settle the issue this session.

Speaker Rainey's belief that the bill can be stopped in the House, is not shared by Democratic Leader Byrns.

Led By Patman.

Leading the parade of members to sign the petition, Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, original exponent of bonus cash payment, yesterday reversed the strategy through which he hoped to hold up the bonus issue until restoration of veterans' benefits in the independent offices bill was safely through the Senate.

His bill, briefly, provides for expansion of the currency to permit immediate payment of veterans' adjusted service certificates in new United States notes which would be lawful money, on parity with the dollar. These notes would be retired gradually when the index

Touhy Aid Says He Got Ransom

Admits Helping Collect $70,000 Factor Payments.

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP).—Walter A. (Buck) Henrichsen, former $90-a-week beer truck driver for Roger Touhy's gang, broke down on the witness stand today and admitted he helped to collect $70,000 ransom last July 12 for the release of John Factor.

Henrichsen, a policeman turned gangster, decided to make the admission, he testified, after being confronted by Isaac Costner, admitted member of the kidnap band who turned State's evidence and pointed out the three defendants on trial—Touhy, Albert Kator, and Gustav Schaefer—as among the men he worked with in the kidnaping.

Touhy, Kator and Schaefer, who had lounged through the testimony of earlier witnesses, sat bolt upright as Henrichsen made his confession.

Another sensational development in the case came today as Peter Williams, 50, of Wauconda, Ill., was seized as the caretaker of a house where Factor supposedly was held during the last 10 days of his imprisonment.

Marylanders Tell Lynching Story Today

Senators to Hold "Court" in Eastern Shore Mob Action.

By Franklin Waltman, Jr.

An unusual Congressional hearing will take place today when a Senate Judiciary sub-committee undertakes a minute inquiry to determine why the Maryland authorities failed to prosecute the persons who lynched George Armwood, Negro, at Princess Anne, last November.

As sovereign State officials, the Maryland authorities are not answerable to Congress and none could remember another incident where Congress undertook an investigation into purely State affairs. Although W. Preston Lane, Maryland attorney general, will appear under subpena, it is understood he will not resist the Senate probe.

The Senate committee's purpose is not to fix any blame for the failure to prosecute the Maryland lynchers, but rather to demonstrate the impotence of State authorities in the face of lynchings. The committee has decided to make a factual, "case history" out of the Maryland affair to show the need for Federal legislation.

Populace Routed Troops

Mr. Lane is expected to tell the committee what he and Gov. Ritchie did last fall to bring to book those who hanged Armwood after dragging him from the county jail. Their action included the sending of State troops to Princess Anne to arrest nine suspects. The troops, after arresting four men, left the Eastern Shore when attacked by an angry populace.

It is understood that Mr. Lane is anxious to make public the evidence gathered by him against the nine alleged lynchers. It was his plan to make this public at a hearing on charges against the men, but he was unable to do so when the county court released the men, without hearings, on habeas corpus writs.

The committee will ask Mr. Lane for this evidence. The group now has under consideration summoning those named by Mr. Lane as participants in the lynching to appear before the committee and tell their side of the story. If this course is pursued, the Senate hearing would

Army Pilots Flying Mail On Schedule

Storm and Big Loads Fail to Cripple New Service.

The mail, flown by Army pilots in Army planes, was coming through on schedule last night, despite cold weather and storm conditions in many parts of the country.

Planes were arriving and leaving at the Washington Airport in an almost constant procession. The only difficulty reported here was the fact that there was more mail than the regular planes could carry. Additional planes were being put into service.

Half-frozen pilots swooped down from the sub-zero temperatures a mile above the earth, delivered their bags of mail and, in some cases, took took off again to complete their trips.

Extra Planes in Use.

The mail from Washington to Richmond was so heavy last night that an extra plane was dispatched to that city, with instructions to return immediately and be ready to fly to Cleveland to carry mail that has piled up in that city. Extra planes had also flown between Washington and Richmond earlier in the day. At 5:15 p. m., the Cleveland plane arrived, followed in 45 minutes by a ship from Pittsburgh. At 6:10, a plane arrived from Newark, deposited mail and then hopped off for Richmond. Another Cleveland plane arrived at 10:15 p. m.

This schedule in and out of Washington went on through the night. At 2:35 a. m., a plane was due from Richmond and another was due from Pittsburgh at 5:15 a. m.

The schedules were maintained through yesterday, beginning at 5:15 a. m., when Lieut. Thayer S. Olds, of the First Pursuit group, brought the first Army-carried mail, arriving exactly on schedule from Cleveland. At 9:30 a. m., two extra planes arrived from the South and then flew on the Northeast route. Shortly afterward, another ship left for Pittsburgh and Cleveland.

"We have things ironed out now, and we are moving on schedule," Lieut. L. G. Saunders, in charge of the air-mail ground detachment at Washington Airport, reported last night.

The story was the same over the country, Associated Press reports indicated. Only two minor mishaps were reported. A plane cracked a

Art Model's Suit Charges Athlete Stood on Her Face

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP).—Charging that Lucien E. Williams, prominent in society and former tennis star, stood on her face, kicked, struck, and otherwise mistreated her, Miss Elizabeth Cornell, artists' model, asked $50,000 damages today in a superior court suit.

Williams, a member of the United States Davis Cup team in 1922, was reported in New York. The assault allegedly took place in Williams' bachelor apartments at 5 p. m., February 9, after a party that had lasted 24 hours.

Miss Cornell said in her suit that Williams first knocked her down and beat her because she resented a request of another guest that she go home. Miss Cornell took the attitude that such a request should come from the host, Williams.

He returned an hour later and resumed the mistreatment, the suit charges, at one point standing on her face with one foot and kicking her with the other. The suit gave Williams' weight as 220 pounds; Miss Cornell's as 98.

Medical treatment, including care of a dislocated jaw, the suit alleged, cost Miss Cornell $560. Damage to her clothing was set at $100.

Williams sent a dozen roses to her room in the hospital, Miss Cornell said, but left town suddenly when she suggested he pay some damages.

D. C. Veteran Is Found Frozen to Death; Wires Down.

New York Traffic Unable to Move

Ships Imperiled Off New England Coast; Jersey Tied Up.

With the mercury again slipping in Washington last night, the United Press reported that 20 persons were dead in a blizzard which swept the Northeastern States early yesterday.

The Weather Bureau predicted the temperature here would fall to 10 above zero before it began to rise.

One man was frozen to death as the edge of the storm, which brought heavy snow and extreme cold weather to the northern half of the Atlantic Seaboard, swept the city.

The victim of the cold weather was Frank Heaphy, 49, an inmate of Soldiers' Home, whose body was found in a snowdrift yesterday near a wall of the institution's cemetery on Harewood road northeast. Heaphy had been missing for two days. He had been in the Army for 21 years and had lived at the home since 1930.

New York Badly Hit.

New York City, according to the Associated Press, was experiencing one of the worst traffic tieups in years. Millions of persons were unable to go to work or were hours late. The stock exchange opened an hour late because there were not sufficient employes present at 10 o'clock, the usual opening time. Railroad traffic between Boston and New York was completely stopped.

On the Maryland Eastern Shore all traffic by rail and road was stopped. One train was halted in a snowdrift. Schools were closed. The State highway department was busy clearing roads. There was some damage to telephone and telegraph wires.

From New York it was reported that Long Island and its thousands of residents who work in Manhattan was virtually isolated. Railroad traffic was almost at a standstill with rails piled high with drifts. Trains from New Jersey and other suburban points were late, although there was no tieup between Philadelphia and New York, and Washington and New York.

Three deaths in New York were attributed to the weather as trucks, automobiles and taxicabs slid about the streets. An army of 35,000 men were put to work clearing the streets. In Queens, firemen aided to move the snow, which had drifted in places to a depth of 6 feet.

New England Shipping Perilled.

Huge banks of snow were blown down subway entrances, slowing up underground traffic. Ice floes in the Hudson River jammed ferry slips and made traveling hazardous. In many suburban communities,

Fairfax Man Killed by Bull

Attacked by a bull, John Shepherd, 76, well known farmer of Fairfax County, Va., was killed yesterday on his farm in Gunston Neck, in Mount Vernon District.

Shepherd had driven his herd of cattle out to water, and when he failed to come home after several hours, his daughter, Mrs. Herbert Hudson, started a search. She found the mangled body of her father in a pasture.

Marks in the snow showed Shepherd had attempted to escape following the first attack by the animal, but was overtaken and killed. His boots had been knocked off, being found about 20 feet from the body.

He is survived by four sons, Norman B., William, and John Shepherd, jr., all of Gunston Neck, and Walter Shepherd, of Woodlawn, Va.; and four daughters, Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Eustis Payne and Mrs. Bessie Schwarb, of Gunston Neck, and Mrs. Willard Leary, of Accotink, Va.

a word to say, but I may as well remark here and now that it will not receive unsupported personal assaults and it will accept only for what they are worth academic conjectures not backed by facts as to what may—or may not—be the effect of this or that provision in a code."

The administrator declared that newspaper criticism of the NRA developed among its officials "the hide an elephant."

He pointed out that beginning next Tuesday and continuing to March 5 or as long as necessary, everybody who has a complaint or suggestion about the NRA will have an opportunity to be heard at public meetings conducted under NRA auspices. These meetings are preliminary, he explained, to the meetings in March of representatives from 500 industries which either are under codes or about to be put under them.

Hearing Broadcast.

"This public hearing will be broadcast from time to time by the great broadcasting networks whose services have been freely given to NRA from the beginning, without which success would have been impossible, he said."

He asserted there was no precedent for either of these meetings. Admitting that NRA had made mistakes, the General declared "the important thing is that 3,000,000 people have been put to work, that $3,000,000,000 has been added to their purchasing power, and that if we had sat around like Buddhist Lamas contemplating a lily bud to attain perfection by conjecture before action, none of these results would have been achieved."

He denied that all the codes would have to be "turned inside out," in spite of the fact that "we have made plenty of mistakes."

"You can sit still and silent and let things happen that may hurt you, or you can come forward now and help us to make your own law succeed," concluded the Administrator in his plea for attendance, which he characterized as "the most important message from NRA since the announcement of the Blue Eagle."

Testimony Ready Today

Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, who testified at a secret session of the Rogers committee Monday, has been asked to supply photostatic copies of all specifications and bids in connection with the recent competitive bidding on $7,500,000 worth of Army planes. Awarding of the contracts for these planes has been held up, meanwhile.

Woodring advised the committee yesterday that one of his assistants, Capt. Wilton B. Persons, will be ready to testify at today's executive session regarding the bidding, which was made competitive at the instigation of the Secretary of War.

The full Military Affairs Committee met yesterday and after approving the McSwain resolution to put "teeth" in its investigation, heard Gen. William Mitchell, retired, in favor of an Army Air Corps, which would not be subordinate to the General Staff.

The House Naval Affairs sub-committee on aviation had expected to hear W. E. Boeing yesterday, but the chairman of the board of the United Aircraft & Transport Co. was unable to appear. In his place, C. L. Egtvedt, of Seattle, Wash., president of the Boeing Airplane Co., testified, telling the committee that from 1927 to 1933, inclusive, his company made an average profit of 12.48 per cent on its Navy airplane contracts.

Chairman Delaney (Democrat), New York, asked the witness why in some years his company secured large Navy contracts, while in others its business with the department was practically nominal. Egtvedt said the fluctuation resulted from the fact that in some years his company was able to compete successfully for contracts, while in others they were awarded to competitors.

Wedell Adds Another Gem to Speed Crown

New Orleans, Feb. 20 (AP).—Jimmy Wedell, Louisiana's premier air pilot, won the repeatedly delayed final speed event of the Pan-American Air Races here when he sent his famous plane, the "44," over a 30-mile course at 210.8 miles per hour. It was a free-for-all event. Gordon Israel was second, and Lee Miles, third.

Brown, Postmaster General under President Hoover, pore over correspondence introduced in Black's efforts to show Senate air-mail contract investigators the Nation's air-mail routes were parceled out without competitive bidding and with small independent air lines given little chance to obtain contracts.

the State Department had lent diplomatic assistance to Pan American Airways in preference to other American companies operating air lines in Central and South American countries.

Questioning on the part the State Department played in Brown's administration of air-mail contracts apparently came as a surprise to the witness, who did not recall a voluminous correspondence he had had with former Secretary of State Stimson, until Black produced a large part in evidence.

It was revealed that at first the State Department had demurred at enlisting the diplomatic service in promoting favors for Pan American in preference to other lines, most of which were seeking Government mail contracts.

But the department, after several letters from Brown, consented to send messages to American ambassadors and consuls in several South and Central American countries instructing them to do all within their power to aid Pan American.

Black revealed that even after several foreign countries had voted against granting concessions to Pan-American, Brown had continued in his requests for diplomatic assistance for the line.

The chairman introduced a letter from Thomas Doe, of Eastern Air Transport, who was attempting to get foreign contracts from the Government, in which he told Brown that he must come to a working agreement with Pan-American in Cuba or there would be an open fight.

Veiled Threat Denied.

Brown's reply to Doe contained the advice that Doe should keep out of the foreign field and also the gratuitous informtaion that the Ludington lines had offered to carry mails on the E. A. T. Eastern seaboard route at a saving of $1,000 a day to the Government.

Brown hotly denied Black's suggestion that this was in the nature of a threat.

The former Cabinet official explained his policy of seeking favoritism for Pan-American because "in a sense it was in partnership with the Government, since it was carrying our mails." The lines which were in opposition to Pan-American, he pointed out, had no mail contracts.

This is the first direct testimony before the committee about Pan-American, which was not affected by the President's concellation order. Black told the Postoffice Department that his investigators were still at work in the air lines's New York office.

Denies Being Umpire.

During the day's hearing Brown took occasion to deny vigorously the testimony of previous witnesses that he had acted as "umpire" in the disagreements arising out of the operators' meeting in 1930, or that they had agreed to abide by the Postmaster General's decision as to "which should go where" on those routes in controversy.

In the course of the spoils conference discussion, Black produced a report of the meeting written by the chairman, William P. MacCracken, air lines attorney, now free on $5,000 bond pending appeal from a ten-day jail sentence imposed by the Senate for contempt.

Brown said that he had no recollection of such a report, but produced instead a memorandum of the results of the meeting written by Earl W. Wadsworth, former superintendent of air mail during Brown's administration.

He read it, including the paragraph in which Wadsworth related how Brown took MacCracken's report, went into an adjoining office and spent a long time studying it. Questioned again about the MacCracken report, Brown said:

"Oh, I remember it now, because Mr. Wadsworth, I know, is a very careful worker."

Black started the day's questioning with further queries about the bid of the United Aviation Co. for a transcontinental route which was finally awarded to Transcontinental and Western Air Express. Brown, who was in Halifax at the time the bid was opened, said that, despite an order from the White House that bids should be transmitted to the Attorney General within 24 hours after they were opened, he instructed his office by long-distance telephone to hold up everything until his return.

He admitted that he had talked to President Hoover about the aviation bid.

Black drew from the witness the statement that every one of the routes canceled two weeks ago had been awarded, either as original contracts, extensions or route certificates, during Brown's tenure of office.

The former Postmaster General will resume the stand today.

Bonus Vote Forced in House Over Roosevelt's Objection

"It is the best plan yet proposed to convey additional money into the hands of those who will buy goods," the Texan said in a statement. "This bill will put cash money in every nook and corner of the Nation, into the hands of nearly 4,000,000 World War veterans, who will use it to purchase comforts and necessities of life, pay debts, taxes and otherwise place it into channels of trade and production."

Claims Huge Saving.

He claimed it would "save the Goverment more than $1,000,000,000, or $112,000,000 for 12 years.

As 145 signatures to the bonus petition became assured, a little group of members clustered around the Speaker's table, where the document was filed, scanning names of last-minute signers.

Mrs. Isabella Greenway, Arizona Democrat and friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, was offered the "honor" of being last to sign. She declined, professing "no interest in self-advertisement." She said she thought the inflationary character of the bill confused the veterans' issue.

After White House disapproval was aired, Speaker Rainey was asked if he would bring pressure to bear on Democrats to change their votes.

"No," he said. "Let them do as they please."

Cash bonus has been voted down once this year in the Senate. Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, offered an unsuccessful amendment to the President's gold bill. It was killed by a voice vote.

Austria Sure Of Power, Ends Martial Law

Nazis Demand Final Showdown Within Eight Days.

Vienna, Feb. 20 (AP).—The government, apparently sure of its position in the face of Nazi demands, announced this afternoon that martial law will be lifted here tomorrow after being in force through a week of sanguinary civil war.

Simultaneously funeral services were conducted for 50 police, soldiers, and home guard victims of the Socialist conflict in which, said Vice Chancellor Fey in an oration, "the peace of Europe hung by a hair."

Officials, meanwhile, studied the demand of Theodore Habicht, advisor of Austrian Nazis, that party members be given government positions within eight days on penalty of a "resumption of the fight."

Pending further study of the Nazi leader's ultimatum, Austrian officials were silent, but the general interpretation was given that an armed conflict is not likely.

Morning newspapers were not permitted to print or comment on the Habicht statements.

Standing bareheaded in a storm which almost swept him off his feet, Chancellor Dollfuss watched the 50 flag-draped coffins lowered into a common grave.

In Carinthia and Nazi Governor Kernmayer refused to relinquish his post to a federal commissioner to be appointed by Dollfuss. Carinthian Nazis said they have no intention of signing the death warrants of jobs they already have.

Habicht's eight-day "truce" in antigovernment attacks—announced last night in a broadcast from Vienna—will give an opportunity for settlement of the Nazi question, before the Carinthian crisis comes to a head.

In Innsbruck bomb explosions during the night wrecked the city hall library, an electric substation and a radio station mast.

Hitler Punctures Ultimatum Rumors

He personally punctured the exiled Austrian Nazi leader's hopes of starting a political war with Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss.

Circumstantial evidence, augmented by reports in official circles, showed that Hitler was highly displeased because Habicht not only acted without the chancellor's authority, but evidently exceeded it.

A broad hint from a person high up in Nazi councils sufficed to halt any publication in the German press of the Habicht ultimatum. Most of the newspaper offices had picked up the speech on their own radio sets

McGraw Improves; Coma Is Denied

Doctors Hopeful After Restful Night.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Feb. 20 (AP). John J. McGraw, veteran baseball leader, who is seriously ill with uremic poisoning, was reported today as in a somewhat improved condition.

"Patient resting comfortably. No change in signs," read a bulletin issued by Dr. L. B. Chapman and Dr. E. L. Kellogg after they visited McGraw.

"The patient passed a comfortable night. Signs of uremia less marked. Temperature 103, pulse 90, respiration 30."

The fact that McGraw, manager of the New York Giants for 30 years, had slept well and appeared in less of a stupor was regarded as a favorable sign. Reports that he had lapsed into a complete coma were termed unfounded.

Reserve Urges Credit Banks For Industry

Move to Serve as Brake Uptest Policy.

By Elliott Thurston.

Members of the Federal Reserve System's advisory council, meeting here yesterday, approved Administration plans for intermediate industrial credit banks, favored longer-term Treasury financing issues and urged modification of the securities act with a view to stimulating the activity of private capital.

At the same time, the Committee for the Nation which has considerable influence upon Administration policy, is out with a charge that the stock exchange bill, drafted by the authors of the securities act, may be "dangerously deflationary" and that it might "fasten upon commerce and industry a bureaucratic control not contemplated even by the sponsors of this proposed legislation." Reserving final judgment, the committee demands a careful study of the probable effects of the pending legislation.

Thus from two sources, ordinarily divergent in views on policy, comes fresh impetus to push the Administration toward right-wing procedure at this time.

Influence Behind Policy.

For, the advisory council, made up of prominent bankers from each reserve district, is throwing its influence behind policy contemplating revival of private capital by removing existing restraints and inhibitions, while the committee for the Nation is disturbed over the danger of strangling private capital which, in circulation, wolud contribute to inflationary credit expansion.

The reserve council had previously presented aprotest against monetary manipulations which tended to intimidate and paralyze private capital activity. The council yesterday concluded that a chain of perhaps a dozen intermediate credit banks to make three to five-year loans to small industry would be beneficial in getting money to work, that with the same end in view it would be advisable to lift some of the restrictions imposed by the securities act, and, finally, that with a definite policy of reviving private enterprise, the Administration could count upon the banks to absorb longer term Treasury issues needed in financing the recovery program.

Would Release Federal Drain.

Moreover, as privae capital comes into action, Federal funds can be slacked off, the budget strains relieved and currency depreciation avoided as a price-lifting expedient. All of this invqlves a distinctly right wing course toward which President Roosevelt has been tending lately. This inclination is further exemplified in his opposition to adding the bonus payment strain to the budget.

The views of the advisory council were summed up after the meeting by Gov. Black, of the Federal Reserve Board, who said:

"The advisory council discussed the general credit situation and reported that all legitimate demands for commercial credit are being met by the banks. Reports were received that some of the banks were instructing their officers to consider and make loans for a longer time than the usual 90 or 120-day commercial paper and to consider the making of loans of 6 or 12 or 18 months if the needs were shown.

"The council also considered with signs of interest Government financing and were pleased it had been so successful and felt that the banks had supported and should support the financial program of the Government.

"The council was glad to see that the Government offerings were for a lengthening period each time and felt that the market would take other offerings for a still longer time and that if the Treasury should consider some long-term financing it could be successfully accomplished.

Should Modify Securities Act.

"They were of the opinion there should be such modifications of the securities act as would open up the capital market and if the capital market was opened up, there would be a very ready response in the market to provide capital for new industry and the renovating of old industry and that through this process the heavy industries would be opened up and that employment would be increased.

"They thought that through opening the capital markets there would be very rapid strides in industry with progress in employment to the general end that the program of recovery would be speeded and greatly advanced.

"There was discussion of the proposed intermediate banks of industry. It was felt there was a real demand for working capital on the part of small industries.

This need was illustrated not only by the demand from all over the country for working capital, but by the financial statements of industries showing great shrinkages in working capital over the last few years which in turn showed the need for new working capital.

"It was felt that this could best be supplied through a series of industrial intermediate credit banks under the jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve banks and operating through those banks and their branches in the 12 cities in which they are located.

Capital Would Respond.

"It was felt further that such mechanism distributed throughout the country and cognizant of the needs of the localities could most readily respond to the needs for capital.

"The council members reported that conditions in their communities showed a large improvement, with deposits in all the banks increasing and that they thought this is due not only to Government expenditures but to a real upturn in business conditions."

Two Issues Rumored.

There is some talk around the Treasury of offering first a 5-year issue, then a 10-year issue at interest of 3¾ or thereabouts. The Treasury feels increasingly confident of its ability to raise money readily now that policy is being directed toward restoration of confidence in the dollar and the budget, and toward removal of such barriers to private investment as the securities and stock exchange acts are believed by many to present.

The whole question of stimulative private capital is raised by the committee for the Nation, which has asked Dr. Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, to put its research division to work to study the effect of the pending stock exchange bill on the general price level, on purchasing power, on the "flow of capital into industry," on public and private credit, on the country's wealth-producing capacity and on "opportunity for individual initiative."

The Industrial Conference Board has agreed to make such a study.

The advisory council of the reserve system also announced yesterday the reelection of Walter W. Smith, of St, Louis, as president; Howard A. Loeb, of Philadelphia, as vice president, and Walter Lichtenstein as secretary. The executive committee is to consist of Mr. Smith, Mr. Loeb, Walter E. Frew, of New York; H. E. McEldowney, of Pittsburgh; W. T. Kemper, of Kansas City, and Thomas M. Steele, of New Haven.

While the reserve council was meeting at the Treasury, President Roosevelt was visited, separately, by Winthrop W. Aldrich, of the Chase Bank, New York; Francis M. Law, president of the Americtan Bankers Association, and Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, all of whom favor policy designed to restore capital markets.

Treasury Accepts Huge Finance Bid

The Treasury announced last night that it had accepted $847,022,400 in subscriptions for two bond issues dated February 19, placed on the market as part of the $10,000,000,000 winter-spring financing program. This is $47,022,400 above the amount originally planned.

The issue was oversubscribed four and a half times, subscriptions amounting to $3,618,164,400. The New York Federal Reserve District alone offered to buy more than the total issue.

The issue of 3 per cent Treasury notes, maturing February 15, 1937, proved more attractive than the issue of 2½ per cent notes maturing December 15, 1935. The former was oversubscribed more than five times, the latter a little more than three times.

Payne, Hoover War Aid, Called By Grand Jury

Army Purchases Under Old Administration to Be Investigated.

By Felix Bruner.

The District grand jury investigating War Department contracts is expected to carry its inquiry back into the Hoover Administration today.

The principal witness will be Frederick H. Payne, Assistant Secretary of War under President Hoover. Payne will be questioned about the conduct of the office during his administration and about reports that since leaving office he has appeared at the War Department in the interest of concerns wishing to do business with that department. Like other witnesses, he will be required to waive immunity from prosecution.

The jury will hear two other major witnesses before it concludes its investigation, which is expected to extend into next week. They are Ralph T. O'Neil, attorney and former National commander of the American Legion, and Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War.

O'Neil Asks to Testify.

The jury yesterday agreed to grant O'Neil's request that he be permitted to testify. He has informed the jury, through his lawyer, John Lewis Smith, that he had "some connection" with these matters and that he wished to be heard.

It is expected that Woodring's testimony will take up at least a day. After hearing Payne today, the jury is expected to adjourn until Friday, when it will hear either Woodring or O'Neil. Whoever does not appear Friday will be called Monday.

Following conclusion of the testimony, it is expected the jury will take some time to review the great volume of evidence. Thus it is not likely that indictments will be returned before next Wednesday.

Woodring Aid Quizzed.

The jury yesterday heard testimony of Lieut. Col. James K. Crain executive officer in Woodring's office; Mrs. Kate Buskingham, Woodring's private secretary; Maj. E. H. Black, of the Quartermaster General's office, and Maj. J. P. Dinsmore, of the Judge Advocate General's office.

With the calling of Payne, it was revealed that the District Attorney's office has been seeking an affidavit from him since early in the investigation. Payne's home is at Greenfield, Mass. He was named Assistant Secretary of War in 1930.

In connection with the investigation, District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and his assistant, David Pine, who has direct charge of the grand jury investigation, have interviewed some of the members of the House sub-committee on military appropriations. It was to this committee that reports of alleged irregularities were made first. From the committee the reports were transmitted to the White House. The Department of Justice investigation and grand jury inquiry followed.

Hopkins said that 14,000 bags will be shipped daily, and will be distributed to destitute families during March, April and May. Arrangements were made to obtain the oranges through the Florida Citrus Control Committee. The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation will obtain the fruit for the cost of packing and shipping.

On the night of March 3, Mr. Roosevelt will attend the White House correspondents' annual dinner.

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

Morgenthau Picks Brainy Aids

Won Treasury Command by Sheer Ability and Loyalty.

Secretary and Father Among Roosevelt's Early Backers.

By the Unofficial Observer.

DURING Roosevelt's illness, Morgenthau branched out, buying in 1922 the American Agriculturist, a Poughkeepsie farm journal which covers the New York milkshed, and becoming an important influence in New York agriculture. He and his father were strong supporters of Al Smith and when Roosevelt reentered public life they were 100 per cent behind him.

After Roosevelt's first election as Governor, he appointed Henry to organize an Agricultural Advisory Commission. Morgenthau got together the leading farm leaders and experts of the States, most of whom happened to be Republicans. For four years he served as chairman of the commission which drafted a broad program for farm relief in New York State. Most of it was enacted into law. During his second State administration, Roosevelt made Morgenthau Commissioner of Conservation. Morgenthau reorganized the department, bringing in the best men he could find. Conservation had a direct bearing on farm relief, for one of its basic features was the purchase of poor farm lands and their reforestation. The $20,000,000 State reforestation program was one of Roosevelt's achievements and in this Morgenthau played an important part.

During the 1932 campaign Roosevelt used him to maintain contact with the farm organizations throughout the country. While Tugwell and M. L. Wilson worked out the crop-reduction plan, Morgenthau lined up the farm leaders. Roosevelt sent Morgenthau with Tugwell to try to lobby the crop plan through the short session of the old Congress, but the effort was a failure. In return, Morgenthau wanted to be made Secretary of Agriculture, but his political claim on the office was less than that of Henry Wallace.

Instead, he was made chairman of the Farm Board and given the job of consolidating the Government's nine agricultural credit agencies into the Farm Credit Administration and of applying the $2,300,000,000 farm mortgage relief program. Once again, Morgenthau demonstrated his ability as an organizer and administrator, by employing the comparatively simple device of hunting for the best-qualified man for every job.

Basis of Achievement Won Treasury Post.

It was, therefore, on the basis of achievement that Roosevelt put him into the Treasury, first as Acting Secretary, then as Secretary in his own name. It was a bigger office than he had dreamed of holding, traditionally the biggest job in the Government. Under Mellon and Mills, the Treasury had become a moss-backed, self-running adjunct to Wall street, and it didn't run any too well. Under Woodin's absentee fiddle-de-dee administration, it had gone to pieces. It had never been married to the New Deal.

This offended the ethical and disciplinarian traditions of the Morgenthau family. Young Henry put his head down and charged the Treasury line-up like a bull. There were groans and hisses when he decreed that all publicity should pass through the hands of his personal publicity assistatnt, Herbert Gaston, and that no one should discuss official business with outsiders unless Gaston gave permission. It was a clumsy order, but typical of Henry Morgenthau, who has no more notion of handling the public than Hoover did.

His motives were unimpeachable: to establish a firm grip on the Treasury policy and to cut the pipelines which linked it to Wall street. In this, he could have obtained the enthusiastic support of the press. As it was, he poured oil on troubled fires.

To make matters worse, Morgenthau issued another order, telling the Treasury guards to dress neatly, snap to attention when approached, and to speak courteously. This was also well meant, although it possibly revealed his own gnawing fear that he is not being treated with proper respect. He is the kind of man who gets along well with his assistants but has trouble with his servants.

Morgenthau's Administration Marked by Efficiency.

Yet his actual administration of the job has been both efficient and constructive. In six weeks he gave the Treasury the most severe series of executive shocks it has had in a generation. He called the bureau heads into his office, ordered them to pay no attention to political influence from either party, and converted these "family conferences" into regular weekly affairs at which each bureau chief has to read a report of the week's work in his bureau. He prodded the Internal Revenue Bureau to collect some $800,000,000 in income tax deficiencies.

Morgenthau's clumsy entrance into the Treasury was soon forgotten and he rapidly had the department working with unprecedented efficiency.

He is fond of saying that the two men who have influenced him most strongly are "Dad" and "the Boss." The "Boss" is Franklin Roosevelt. Possibly Henry's shyness and uncertainty in public speech are the result of "Dad's" garrulity and self-assertiveness. There is strong affection between "Young Henry" and "Uncle Henry," as the Roosevelts call the elder Morgenthau, and even now that he is Secretary of the Treasury one suspects that "Young Henry" looks on "Dad," who never got higher than Ambassador to Turkey, as a bigger and more competent man. The reverse is true. If Henry talked freely, he might be as inept as his father in the field of diplomacy, but Henry holds his tongue and concentrates on his administrative work, at which he is a knockout.

Herbert E. Gaston, keen, level-headed, a first-class newspaperman, congratulating Secretary Morgenthau on his appointment to the Treasury post, where the latter counts heavily on Gaston. Below, Roswell Magill, the answer to Morgenthau's call for "the best man in the United States" on income-tax matters.

His promotion to the head of the Treasury is, however, due not only to his administrative competence. It is also due to the fact that, when Roosevelt entered office, Morgenthau was the one enthusiastic supporter of the "commodity dollar" high up in the Administration. Henry Wallace and a few others had advocated abandonment of the gold standard, but Morgenthau was a disciple of his Cornell teacher, Prof. Warren, and it was only natural that when the Treasury crowd first assembled by Roosevelt suffered from severe gastritis when asked to swallow a managed currency, Henry should be put in command. He had been with Roosevelt on the Indianapolis when the famous July 3 monetary shock was cabled to the London Conference.

Ablest Men Picked As His Assistants.

He is concerned in building up an administrative system equipped to handle the commodity dollar. He is always fighting for more pay for his men and likes to reach down for able youngsters and promote them to high positions. He operates his office like clockwork.

Personally, he is a simple and likeable soul, and probably is the best organizer and administrator in the New Deal.

The secret of his ability at administration is revealed through the method by which he picks his assistants. He works with two "Brain Trusts." The monetary brain trust—that invisible team of Professors Warren and Rogers—was given to him ready-made. His job is to do what they tell him, through Roosevelt, must be done. For that purpose, he has organized a first-class administrative brain trust. Here are four of them: Herbert E. Gaston, Herman Oliphant, Roswell Magill and William H. McReynolds.

They were selected as being the best man available for the job available, without reference to politics.

Henry Morgenthau needed a good publicity man and general assistant in the New York State Conservation Department about the time that the New York World folded up in 1931. Some of the old "World" men recommended Gaston. Morgenthau hired him. Soon afterward he made Gaston deputy commissioner; he took him to Washington and made him secretary of the Farm Board and then deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration when he took Gaston to the Treasury as a Special Assistant. It was an historic event, for with Gaston the Non-Partisan League, one of the bugaboos of all right-thinking conservatives, acquired an important post in the Government of the United States for the first time, and in the Treasury, of all places. Here is how it happened.

Gaston's Early Career in Newspaper Field.

Gaston was born 52 years ago in Halsey, Oreg., the son of a small merchant and grain dealer. He went to school in Tacoma, and later attended the University of Washington and the University of Chicago. In 1906, he entered newspaper work in Tacoma. Four years later he moved on to Spokane, rising to the position of managing editor and editorial writer of the Spokane Chronicle by 1916.

Then Dave Coates, Spokane city commissioner, an old-time Socialist, became interested in the Nonpartisian League, went to North Dakota and made Gaston chief of publications for the league. At the peak, Gaston edited one magazine, two dailies and eight State weeklies, and, in 1919, he moved on to run the league's Minneapolis Daily Star for three years, until his fight against the gambling interests in the Twin Cities annoyed the political backers of one of the leading Socialist politicians. As a result, Gaston moved on to New York and got a job as copyreader with the New York World. When the World ceased publication nine years later, he was the paper's night editor.

No man was more astounded to see Gaston enter the Treasury than J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency. O'Connor, a hard-boiled Tory, had fought the Nonpartisan League tooth and nail in the Dakotas and had been the target of many of Gaston's editorial tenstrikes.

Gaston's political pedigree suggests the real lineage of the New Deal. He was a Roosevelt Republican under "Teddy," a Bull-Mooser in 1912, then a Wilsonite, then a Socialist, then a LaFollette independent in 1924, an Al Smith man in 1928 and finally a Roosevelt Liberal. He is a keen, level-headed man, a first-class newspaperman and Morgenthau leans on him heavily in matters of public policy as well as public relations.

When Morgenthau was given the job of organizing the Farm Credit Administration, he needed a first-class liberal lawyer with an agricultural background. He asked his friend, Edward S. Greenbaum, to recommend somebody. Greenbaum couldn't think of a good man but suggested that Henry write to Herman Oliphant, head of the Institute of Law at Johns Hopkins University, who might know of someone who would fit the specifications. Oliphant made two or three suggestions, leading his list with Donald Richberg. Then Morgenthau invited Oliphant to come to Washington for a personal talk, persuaded him to handle a temporary job which had to be done in a hurry, and finally induced him to remain as counsel to the Farm Credit Administration.

Oliphant Won Name As "Super-Lawyer."

Oliphant is what is known to the legal profesion as a "super-lawyer." Born in Indiana 50 years ago, graduate of Indiana University and the University of Chicago Law School, his career since 1914 has been as a teacher of law. He taught at Chicago University and at Columbia and in 1929 helped to organize the Institute of Law at Johns Hopkins. He handled various legal jobs for the War Trade Intelligence and the Emergency Fleet Corporation during the war.

He is a rather short, thin, wiry man, who combines a massive legal knowledge with unobstrusive practical ability. He is a wizard at finding precedents for unconventional undertakings. The way in which he picked his staff is typical of both him and of the Morgenthau regime. After selecting a few men whom he knew and trusted for key positions, he wrote to the heads of the ten leading American law schools and asked each of them for the name of the best man in the 1932 graduating class. He took these ten youngsters as staff assistants and moved some of them with him from the Farm Credit Administration.

When Morgenthau needed an income tax specialist, he began by asking for "the best man in the United States." The man who was named most often was Roswell Magill, associate professor of law at Columbia. Magill was a Republican, who had served the Treasury under Mellon but that made no difference to Morgenthau, who simply made sure that he had no embarrassing corporation or personal connections, and that he would give loyal service. Then he gave him the job.

Under 40, Magill is a native of Illinois who graduated from Dartmouth and the University of Chicago Law School. After combined teaching and legal practice in Chicago, he joined the staff of Columbia University. He was the Treasury's special attorney and chief attorney in 1923-25, helped the Government of Puerto Rico revise its tax system, and is the author of several case books on the law of taxation and related matters.

Tomorrow—McReynolds, special aid of Morgenthau.

Hopkins Urges 30-Hour Week To Give Jobs

Administrator Warns Not to Overdo Move at Hearing.

A warning to guard against enactment of legislation leading to a "glorified spread-the-work movement" was given to the House Labor Committee yesterday by CWA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, testifying on the Connery 30-hour-week bill.

A statement by Committee Chairman William P. Connery that as understood CWA workers planned a march to Washington similar to the bonus marchers if the program was dropped elicited the reply from Hopkins that he "didn't have the jitters."

Hopkins nevertheless urged the committee to report out a bill which would reduce hours of work, put more people to work and raise hourly wages.

Would Spread Work.

"I believe it would be wise in the present economic situation," Hopkins said, "to reduce hours of work, put more people to work and raise hourly wages. I have no fixed judgment as to whether this should be accomplished by legislation or by adjustment of NRA codes."

Hopkins definitely was in favor of an unemployment insurance bill. He declined to commit himself as to how many men would be put back to work. Previous estimates that the 30-hour week bill would reemploy all but about 2,000,000 workers were characterized by Hopkins as "guesswork."

Answering questions in regard to the Civil Works Administration, Hopkins said the Administration would not be a means of changing wage scales. He said local boards decided prevailing rates.

Chary of 1929 Boom.

He told the committee he did not believe 1929 conditions should be brought back. He said conditions of that time were wholly artificial.

Questioned by Representative John Lesinski (Republican), Michigan, with regard to CWA purchases made in Lesinski's district, which had not yet been paid for, Hopkins said orders had been issued for payment of all bills up to January 13. He said, however, that in some instances purchasing agents had found discrepancies which would have to be ironed out before payment could be made.

Waits Till Courthouse Opens to Pay Taxes!

El Dorado, Ark., Feb. 20 (AP).—An odd counterpart to the baseball bleacherite who spends the night outside a baseball park to be first in line for a world series ticket, has been found in T. Sturgiss, 65, a Negro, first to pay in taxes yearly in Union County for the past 16 years.

The aged farmer was outside the courthouse here before dawn yesterday to make sure that he kept his record unbroken. He owns a 265-acre farm at Mount. Holly.

Paymaster Is Held After "Fake" Holdup

Wetumpka, Ala., Feb. 20 (AP).—Sheriff Hasty Golden announced today that Ed Hornsby, paymaster at the Tallassee Mills, had confessed he engineered a $2,532 pay-roll robbery there last week to obtain money to meet demands of an extortion note purported to have been received from Quincy, Ills.

Golden said he arrested Hornsby after obtaining a confession from James Andrews, arrested the day of the alleged holdup, that the robbery of the paymaster was a "fake."

Four Billions Spent by U. S.; 7 Left to July

Treasury Has 60-Million Surplus Due to Dollar Devaluation Gain.

(Associated Press.)

Federal spending for the fiscal year leaped past the four billion dollar mark yesterday to accompaniment of a recommendation to the House that $62,226,000 be allowed the Agriculture Department and Farm Credit Administration for the year beginning July 1.

While the Senate and House again called up the Naval construction and tax bills, respectively, President Roosevelt dwelt on more immediate questions for consideration at session with "emergency council" advisers.

To fulfill his estimates of recovery program outlays for the year that ends June 30, some $7,000,000,000 would have to be spent between now and then. Meanwhile, the Treasury statement showed a surplus of over $60,000,000,000 there due to the immense dollar devaluation profits.

The Appropriations Committee, in recommending the agriculture supply bill that the House will send to the Senate on the heels of the $258,000,000 tax bill to be passed today, authorized the post of Undersecretary of Agriculture Destined for it, at a higer salary, is Rexford Guy Tugwell, now Assistant Secretary.

The Agriculture Adjustment Administration has used less than a tenth of the $100,000,000 it has, so no appropriation was included for that agency, which will pay $830,000,000 to farmers during the coming fiscal year.

Baltimore Bread Price Called Unjustifiable

Dr. Frederick C. Howe, AAA consumers council, charged yesterday that recent increases in Baltimore bread prices were unjustifiable, and demanded "a complete explanation." He said:

"It is clearly up to the bakers of Baltimore to show that wages of employes have been increased sufficiently to justify the higher charge for bread."

Rail Loan Announced.

The Public Works Administration has signed a contract to lend $5,028,000 to the Nickle Plate Railroad for new equipment, Administrator Ickes announced yesterday.

House Ballot Today Tests 3-Cent Stamp

Republicans to Force Showdown on Mail Rate's Repeal.

Repeal of the 3-cent postal rate on first class mail, and restoration of former 2-cent levels, will be pressed to a vote in the House today over Administration opposition, as the House moves to a ballot on its $258,000,000 income tax revision bill.

Mustering full minority strength at a Republican steering committee yesterday, House Republicans united in an effort to send the tax bill back to committee for the postal rate change.

Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, announced he will offer the motion before the tax bill is passed today by the House.

Under the "gag" rule adopted last week, the minority is permitted one motion to recommit the measure, and Republicans have chosen this popular issue in hopes of upsetting the Democratic applecart. If approved, it automatically would throw $75,000,000 in revenues out of the bill.

Trial Meeting Today.

Meantime, the Ways and Means Committee will meet finally this morning to agree on additional "strengthening" amendments to the tax measure, Chairman Robert J. Doughton said.

"There will be no large income tax evasion loopholes when we get through," he asserted.

The committee is considering several "clarifying" maendments and changes in the personal holding company section which would make it difficult for persons of large incomes to avoid tax payment by forming private companies.

One of the more objectionable of the so-called "nuisance taxes" enacted last session, the stamp tax has widespread popular opposition and proposed repeal is certain to get many Democratic votes.

Meanwhile, Republican exponents of a manufacturers' sales tax as a substitute for present excise levies, continued to argue sales tax merits, although yesterday's decision to make postage rates the minority issue definitely doomed any chance of a vote on the sales levy.

Sees Sales Tax Certain.

"Eventually, a general manufacturers' sales excise law, levied equitably and fairly upon all industry, at a low rate, with all necessities of lifee exempted, is certain to be adopted as a most important part of our tax system," Representative Clarence J. McLeod (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday told the House.

At the same time, Representative John Taber (Republican), of New York, a member of the Appropriations Committee, launched a new attack on Federal spending, declaring:

"If our expenditures are to continue at the ratee they are now going we must have a 10 per cent tax on small incomes, with no exemptions, if we are going to balance the budget."

He declared the $258,000,000 in estimated revenues from the new tax bill inadequate, and the estimated $1,250,000,000 income tax collection for 1935 short four times over of meeting the $5,000,000,000 needed to balance the budget."

Zero Wave Is Due; 20 Die in Storm

telephone connections were broken by the storm. Many trains from the West were late. The Twentieth Century Limited was 2 hours late.

From Boston, the Associated Press reported that shipping was imperilled. A 2,500-ton collier was blown ashore, three persons lost their lives on land, and several were hurt in a triple train crash.

Fifteen trains, carrying between 3,000 and 4,000 passengers, lay snowbound in Connecticut and Rhode Island, where railroad officials described the blizzard as the most severe since 1888.

Thirty men aboard the collier Northern Sword were in danger as the wind tossed the boat around in shoal water, and heavy seas pounded it near Boston. Coast Guardsmen stood by hoping to rescue the crew.

Off Cuttyhunk Island on the Southern Massachusetts shore, Coast Guardsmen rescued the crew of an 80-foot schooner, Hope Leslie. Twenty miles south of Portland Light, the big tanker Tydol No. 2 was in distress. Numerous other smaller craft were reported in trouble.

At Revere, Mass., on the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad, two passenger trains and a snow plow crashed in the blizzard, causing injury to eight persons.

Three Pennsylvania railroad locomotives were sent from Wilmington, Del., to try to pull a northbound pasenger train from Centreville, Md., out of snowdrifts. Snow averaged a foot in depth on the Maryland Eastern Shore.

Drifts 6 to 8 Feet Deep.

From Mount Airy, Md., drifts 6 to 8 feet deep were reported. The high school there was closed. The Mount Airy-Damascus road, leading to Washington, was not cleared until noon.

Caught in the heavy snow, W. T. Henley, Washington aviator, made a forced landing at Brunswick, Md. He had left Cumberland for Washington and become lost in the blizzard.

Type Friends' Meeting Had 117 Years Ago Held Foot Warmers.

A stove, which was ultra modern back in 1817 when soldiers still were returning from the War of 1812, has been presented by the Friends' Meeting, Sandy Spring, Md., to the Smithsonian Institution.

The ancient stove, which kept chill out of the Friends' meeting house more than a century ago, was one of two purchased by William Thomas, then treasurer of the organization. Thomas went to Baltimore in a carriage to buy the stoves, and paid $48 each for them, as well as $10 for 50 feet of extra pipe. For years the stoves functioned in the meeting house, until more modern ones arrived.

Thomas' descendants, Miss June Thomas, a great-great-granddaughter and William John Thomas, a great-grandson, are still active in the Friends Meeting. The latter is president of the board of trustees and is proud of the stove which was equipped with soapstone footwarmers, resembling bricks.

Besides the warmers, the Smithsonian got a poker and several pieces of pipe. Quaker ladies of long ago placed their feet on the warmers while seated at worship on cold days.

Good Guess

Weather Bureau Average Above 85 Per Cent.

The weather man isn't really a bad guesser—look at the statistics and see whose guessing is off, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Dr. Charles C. Clark, acting chief of the United States Weather Bureau, was asked while before the House Appropriations Committee about the percentage of accuracy "of your forecast."

"Through a long number of years," Dr. Clark replied, "with as accurate a check or verification as we can get on them, they are from 85 to 90 per cent correct. That is for the forecasts from 24 to 36 hours in advance."

And that accuracy percentage includes both rain and temperature forecasts.

Coroner Holds Nurse After Woman Dies

A 35-year-old nurse was held for grand jury action yesterday, following a coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Nancy Kemerer, 23, of 1201 Thirteeth street northwest.

Mrs. Kemerer died Monday in Emergency Hospital. Police said she was the victim of an illegal operation. Lillian May Parker, the nurse, of 200 E street northwest, was ordered held by the coroner. She was alleged to have attended Mrs. Kemerer during a previous illness.

Strawberries in Alaska, Peas and Peaches in California, While the East Shivers on Diet of Icicles and Snowballs.

San Francisco, Feb. 20 (AP).—Of course, the Pacific Coast wouldn't brag about its weather, particularly while much of the East is congealed in snow and ice, but the folks back there ought to know the facts, anyway.

Up in Ketchikan, Alaska, youngsters went swimming in the channel yesterday about the time freezing temperatures were sweeping across northern Florida. Bushes and strawberry plants were beginning to bud in that section of the northern territory. Ketchikan's maximum temperature for the day was 57, against northern Florida's minimum of 31 this morning.

While snow clogged the sidewalks of New York and other Eastern thoroughfares, Portland, Oreg., had its 370th consecutive day without freezing temperature.

Southern California farmers were struggling through labor troubles to harvest the pea crop, and almond and peach blossoms were bursting in many sections of the Golden State.

Citizens of the San Francisco peninsula were worrying about finding time to mow their lawns, and the girls down at Palm Springs and other Southern California play places were posing in shorts for photographers. California temperatures at noon ranged from 56 to 62 at various places.

James Roosevelt Opposing Mother on Child Labor Bill

First Lady Is Puzzled But Admits Son Has Right to Opinions.

Mrs. Roosevelt would like to know why her son, James, is opposing the child labor amendment.

She told reporters at her press conference yesterday that she is writing to him to ask about his attitude toward the measure which is now pending in Massachusetts.

"Of course," she said, "my son has a perfect right to his opinion, and he probably has reasons he thinks are sufficient to justify his stand, but I rather think those reasons wouldn't seem sufficient to me."

Mrs. Roosevelt also indicated that she probably would ask the same question of Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to England, who with Mrs. Bingham is a guest at the White House.

She said she was in complete sympathy with Secretary Frances Perkins, who left last night to make a speech in behalf of the amendment before the Kentucky Legislature.

In answer to a question about the newspaper code and the selling of newspapers by boys, Mrs. Roosevelt replied that "a civilization should not be based on the labor of children."

Interviewed by the Associated Press in Boston, James Roosevelt said: "I guess I'll wait until I receive mother's letter before I say anything."

"I expect," he added, "to give out a statement soon on my reason for opposing the amendment. I had intended to give it out today, but now I'll wait until I receive mother's letter."

He said he would not make the correspondence public.

The Massachusetts Legislature has refused to approve the child labor amendment.

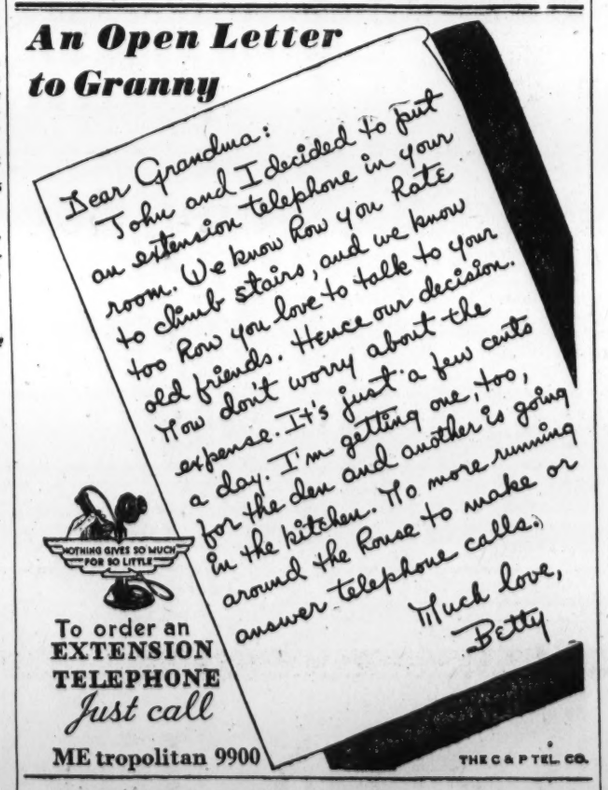
An Open Letter to Granny



Dear Grandma:
John and I decided to put an extension telephone in your room. We know how you hate to climb stairs, and we know too how you love to talk to your old friends. Hence our decision. Now don't worry about the expense. It's just a few cents a day. I'm getting one, too, for the den and another is going in the kitchen. No more running around the house to make or answer telephone calls.
Much love,
Betty

Gun Bore Clew In Boy's Killing Causes Arrest

Man Seized After Tests of Various Weapons Claims Alibi.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Dewey Elliott, 37, formerly of Virginia, was arrested yesterday and charged with the slaying of Luther Lamb, 14, shot December 12 on his way home from school.

Police could offer no motive for the shooting, although at first they laid the slaying to an accident, thinking some one had been shooting at a mark and a bullet had been deflected.

Last week State police took four guns from residents of the section to Harrisburg, Pa., for examination by a State police ballistics expert. On the strength of the findings, Elliott was arrested. The bullet taken from the brain of the Lamb youth fitted the Elliott gun, State police were told.

Elliott denies the shooting, saying he and another youth were hunting that afternoon far from the fatal scene.

Anne Arundel Beach Barrier Plan Advanced

Conferees at Annapolis Discuss Erection of Bulkheads.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 20 (Spl.). Further plans concerning allocation of funds for bulkheads, which will be built to prevent erosion of beach-front properties in Anne Arundel County, were discussed today at a conference between taxpayers and other representatives of the respective sections and the board of county commissioners.

In all, protection will be afforded seven resort properties where many Washingtonians own homes, and which are frequented by thousands during the summer season. Approximately 6 miles of bulkheads are to be built at an outlay of $300,000, funds to come from a Public Works loan and grant to the county. Work on the project is expected to begin shortly.

One of the largest bulkheads will be that at North Beach Park. It will protect 8,000 feet of shore line and will join another bulkhead in Calvert County protecting Chesapeake and South Beach properties. Creosoted timber will be used in construction.

Other properties to be thus improved include Masons Beach, Beverly Beach, Franklin Manor and Owings Beach.

Store Robbery Suspects Taken

3 Cumberland Men Held in Assault on Man Near Bedford.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 20 (Spl.). Within 24 hours after they are alleged to have robbed Henry Kline, 72, proprietor of a roadside store between Bedford and Everett, Pa., three local men, Alvin R. Beegle, 33, Raymond A. Norris, 29, and Arthur Charlton, 36, were apprehended and were in jail at Bedford.

They were arrested here and waived extradition, Maryland officers say they admitted having robbed Kline, dividing the $140 loot. Beegle and Norris are said to have had their share, but Charlton had only a few dollars.

Kline was preparing to close at 11 p. m. Saturday, when two men assaulted him, the third waiting in an automobile.

Beegle is a native of Bedford County. Norris, a native of the Little Orleans section in this county, was once tried here on a charge of killing his father, but was acquitted.

2 on St. John's Board Resign

Members Quit as Sequel to Quarrel Causing Gordon Ouster.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Dissension between the alumni and members of the board of St. John's College that brought about the naming of former National Prohibition Administrator Amos W. W. Woodcock to replace Douglas H. Gordon, of Baltimore, as president of the institution, has been followed by the resignation of two prominent members of the board.

They are Sylvester W. Labrot, of St. Margarets, and William Woodward, New York City.

Mr. Labrot, master of Holly Beach Farm, near here, is now at Miami. He made known his move in a telegram to Annapolis friends.

Mr. Woodward, president of the Central National Bank, of New York, has long been a member of the governing body, was in recent years the board president, and has been a stanch friend and benefactor of the college.

No formal statement was made by either of the resigned board members, nor has Dr. Gordon commented on affairs although he had predicted the resignation of Woodward and Labrot.

West Virginia Assembly Gets Relief Demand

U. S. Declares State Must Raise $250,000 Monthly to Obtain Grants.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.). Gov. H. G. Kump today passed on to the Legislature the demand of the Federal Government for a monthly appropriation of $250,000 by the State as a prerequisite for continuation of Federal relief grants.

In a brief message accompanied by a letter from William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator, notifying him of the Federal ultimatum, Gov. Kump recommended "prompt consideration and such action as the Legislature in its wisdom may find proper."

Final legislative approval was given in the Senate to a bill legalizing liquor advertisements in the State.

The House of Delegates approved the principle of equal utility valuations for rate-making and taxation purposes in passing the first of a group of utility bills sponsored by Delegate Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of Lewis. A special provision for this was attached. A similar proposal was voted down in the Senate several weeks ago. The bill eliminates the present provision permitting utilities to earn a return of 8 per cent on their investments.

The second bill, permitting the State Public Service Commission to cut rates without a hearing, but giving the utilities the right to appeal to the courts, also was approved by the House.

Efforts to inrtoduce a depletion tax, a consumers' sales tax and a tobacco and luxury tax as a substitute for the pending corporate franchise tax were quashed by Speaker Ralph M. Hiner (Democrat), of Pendleton, who declared consideration should not be given these until action is taken on the franchise bills.

The Congressional redistricting fight advanced another step toward conference when the Senate refused to accept a House proposal of reapportionment and asked the House to recede from its position. Upon refusal of the House to do so a conference committee will be named.

On motion of Delegate Rufus Lester (Democrat), of Wayne, the House adopted a resolution requesting the State Board of Education to rescind requirements for eight semester hours of training as a requirement for examination for a teaching certificate.

Three bills permitting the use of county jail prisoners in highway construction and on school grounds were passed by the Senate and sent to the House.

Merchant Often Robbed Offers Key to Thieves

Princeton, W. Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Robbers who have repeatedly broken into Luther Hale's drug store here have been publicly invited by him to call at his home the next time and get a pass key.

This, Hale believes, would be cheaper and less troublesome in the long run, as the expense of replacing broken windows has been going into money and as the average loot of the robberies has not been great. A gang of hoodlum boys is suspected.

Quite Right

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.). A bewildered thief somewhere in the State is puzzled over what he is going to do with 72 shoes he took from an automobile. All the shoes are for the right foot only.

The shoes were taken here from the car of William T. Perryman, a shoe salesman, of Raleigh, N. C.

When he started on the tour, Perryman thought he might have opportunity to play some golf, so he took along a dozen golf balls, a gray suit, knickers, socks and other golfing habiliments. The thief apparently had the same idea, for he took all these with the sample shoes.

Government's Expenses Pass 4-Billion Mark

But Devaluation Prot Gives U. S. Surplus of $601,705,000.

(Associated Press.)

Government expenditures for the fiscal year passed four billion dollars yesterday, leaving seven billion to be spent by the end of June to fulfill President Roosevelt's budget estimates.

Despite the huge expenditures, the large profit reaped on gold dollar devaluation left the Treasury with a surplus of $601,705,000.

Eliminating the gold profit of $2,206,000,000 deficit.

Mr. Roosevelt estimated the deficit at the fiscal year end on July 1 would be $7,309,000,000. This would bring the public debt from yesterday's figure of $25,218,000,000 to $29,847,000,000.

Emergency expenditures for the fiscal year to date totaled $2,261,674,000. The President's estimates for emergency expenditures for the entire year exceeded $7,500,000,000 with the RFC topping other agencies with $3,969,000,000. At present the RFC is leading all other emergency agencies with outlays of $1,165,000,000.

Doubt was existed in some quarters as to whether the Government can actually spend as much money as estimated.

Secretary Morgenthau has expressed the belief it could be done and simultaneously has emphasized the Government will not exceed the budget.

Total receipts for the fiscal year were given as $4,635,951,000, but this includes the $2,807,000,000 gold profit.

Marylanders Tell Of Lynching Today

Sobeloff to Appear.

Another witness from Maryland appearing under subpena will be United States District Attorney Simon E. Sobeloff. The latter did not figure in the news of the lynching and the subsequent developments and it is not known what questions will be asked him.

The Judiciary sub-committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, is holding hearings on the Wagner-Costigan Federal antilynching bill. This measure would impose a fine of $5,000 on any State or county law officer who failed to do his duty to protect prisoners or to prosecute lynchers.

Under the bill, any county where a person is lynched would be subject to a fine of $10,000, which may be recovered for the victim's family by suit in a United States court. Federal district courts also would be given jurisdiction to try lynchers.

Validity Questioned.

The sub-committee members expressed approval of the purposes of the bill at the hearing yesterday, although several indicated doubt that it would be Constitutional.

Both Senators Robert F. Wagner and Edward P. Costigan, authors of the bill, appeared before the committee yesterday and urged its enactment. Senator Costigan said there was no doubt of its constitutionality since the Constitution guaranteed to all citizens the equal protection of the laws.

Senator Wagner argued it was impossible to wipe out "the horrible stain of lynchings" on American civilization by State action. He said that "the very States that should do the most are in a position to do the least."

Gov. Rolph Denounced.

Senator Costigan denounced "the inactivity" of Gov. James Rolph in the recent San Jose, Calif., lynching, adding that it had sent "a tidal wave of resentment and indignation" across the Nation.

Others who urged approval of the bill were Arthur Garfield Hayes, liberal lawyer; Walter White, secretary of the Association for Advancement of Colored People; Dr. Charles H. Huston, dean of Howard University Law School; Marc Connelly, playwright, and Prof. Karl N. Llewellyn, of Columbia University Law School.

They cited the "criminality and brutality" of lynchings, their growth throughout the country, the causes of such crimes and the subsequent handling of the cases. Mr. Hayes said that while in Germany last summer protesting against persecution of Jews he was met everywhere with the question, "How about the lynching of Negroes in America?" He said it was a difficult question to meet.

Whitney's First Cotton Gin Believed Found.

Washington, Ga., Feb. 20 (AP). Nobody ever paid much attention to a decrepit piece of machinery which lay in an old Wilkes County barn for years and years.

The other day, the farmer in whose barn the ancient machine lay told J. Luke Burdette about it.

"It's probably been in the old barn for more than 100 years," he said.

Burdette looked it over and found what he believes to be the original model for Eli Whitney's first power cotton gin, the machine which revolutionized the cotton industry in the South.

Burdette has devoted years of study to Whitney's work in this section. The model is sai dto be remarkably similar to the present day gin.

Army Pilots Fly Mail on Schedule tail skid landing at Fort Worth, and another nosed over at Greenville, S. C. No one was injured.

Grounded all Monday night by "dirty weather," the Army mail planes began to operate from Newark Airport at noon yesterday. All regular schedules from that airport, except those to New England, where even trains had ceased to run, were maintained.

Lieut. A. R. Acheson was the first to leave Newark. Carrying 189 pounds of mail, he flew in an observation type ship over the territory called by aviators the worst flying country in America, to Cleveland.

Less than an hour earlier, Lieut. Donald Wackwitz had arrived from Cleveland. His report on the weather was good enough to start planes in the opposite direction.

At the Cleveland airport, as at the Washington airport, mail was piling up. It was explained that this is because Army planes can carry considerably less than commercial planes.

In the South and far West the Army's pilots fought headwinds. The first plane to reach Dallas, Tex., was an hour late, arriving at 8 a. m. The plane from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles fought headwinds all the way.

Beats Commercial Record.

A plane landed at Pueblo, Colo., on the Cheyenne-Pueblo route, having flown 210 miles in one hour and 20 minutes, or 40 minutes faster than the commercial schedule.

The mail was heavy all over the country. Stamp collectors were responsible. They place considerable value on covers carried on their first trips by the Army planes.

'Please Arrest Me,' Plea Just About Dumbfounds Detective

But to Be Obliging, He Leaves His Warm Bed to Make "Pinch."

Detective Sergt. R. J. Barrett was rudely awakened from dreams of crime waves and deeds of valor at 3 a. m. yesterday by the presistent ringing of his telephone.

Sleepily he lifted the receiver, a voice over the telephone announced, "I want to be locked up; my pal was arrested several days ago and I'm the man you are looking for on those holdups."

Barrett had the man repeat his story before he gathered its full significance. Still unbelieving, he arrived at the address given him, 1345 L street northwest, and found James T. Cole, 26, unchanged in his opinion that jail was the best place for him. A little salesmanship convinced Barrett that Cole was right and he was taken to police headquarters and booked for investigation.

The specific crimes to which Cole lays claim are holdups of two delicatessen stores, one at 2454 Eighteenth street northwest, and one at 3409 Fourteenth street northwest, about a week ago. Harry M. Alexander, 31, of 3501 Thirteenth street northwest, was arrested by Barrett several days ago in connection with these cases and held for investigation.

Nudists at Arts Ball Must Wear Something.

Cleveland, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Complete nudity is not a costume, it appears, even to those of such liberal views as members of the Kokoon Art Club here.

When a group of 29 nudists applied for a block of tickets to the Kokoon's annual bal masque, and admitted that they intended to attend the ball strictly as nudists, the costume committee demurred.

"You've got to wear costumes," was the ruling. "It needn't be much, but how are we going to judge costumes unless you wear a little something?"

Russell Named To Command Marine Corps

2 Other Washington Men in Corps Promoted by Roosevelt.

One of the Marine Corps' ablest administrators, Maj. Gen. John Henry Russell, American High Commissioner in Haiti for eight years, was named the Corps' next commandant yesterday.

His name was sent by President Roosevelt to the Senate for confirmation as the successor of Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, who will be retired next month by the age limit.

At the same time the President nominated Brig. Gen. Harry Lee and Col. Douglas McDougal to the ranks of major general and brigadier general, respectively, in the Corps. All appointees are residents of the Capital.

Gen. Russell's efforts at sociological, governmental and economic reforms in Haiti brought him international recognition. His selection came in 1922 as the result of the visit of a congressional investigation committee while he was in command of the First Brigade.

Retaining his military position, Gen. Russell exchanged his uniform for civilian dress and went to work instituting a series of reforms, including a system of vocational education, which brought him the Medaille Militaire from the Hatian government and the Navy and Distinguished Service crosses from the Navy.

Explained Methods to British.

At the request of the British government he sent a complete report on his activities to Egypt for the study of English authorities there.

Gen. Russell served in his diplomatic capacity with the rank of ambassador extraordinary in Haiti until February, 1930. He was soon after sent to the Marine Corps base at San Diego, Calif., as commanding general, and in December, 1932, was transferred to command the Marine base at Quantico, Va. For about a year he has been stationed in Washington as assistant to Gen. Fuller.

Quiet, unassuming, almost scholarly, Gen. Russell is different from the popular conception of a "devildog" Marine officer. He is a frequent contributor to naval and military periodicals. He was born in 1872 in California, and appointed to the Naval Academy in 1898.

Gen. Lee, born here on June 4, 1872, has seen service in both the Spanish-American and World Wars. He was in command of the Sixth Regiment of Marines, one of the American units to see extensive battle service in France, and was decorated with the Army Distinguished Service Medal, the Navy Distinguished Service Medal, the French Legion of Honor and won three Croix de Guerre citations.

Gen. Lee was military governor of Santo Domingo from December, 1922, to July, 1924. Later he commanded the Marines at Paris Island, S. C., until his transfer to Quantico in August, 1927, as executive officer. He was placed in command at Quantico in March, 1933.

Col. McDougal, born in San Francisco, April 23, 1876, served in the Navy during the Spanish War and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marines in 1900. He served in most of the Marine stations in the Far East and in 1914 was in Mexico.

He served in France from September, 1918 to July, 1919. He was appointed director of operations and training at Marine Corps headquarters, Washington, in 1931. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by Secretary Swanson in November, 1933.

2d Wynekoop Trial Delayed

Defense, Prosecution in Row Over Selection of Jurors.

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP).—The work of selecting a jury for the second trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, alleged slaye rof her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynkoop, on an operating table, ran into stormy seas today after a morning of unruffled sailing. Two panels, the result of an extended morning session, were under bailiffs guard, while defense and prosecution sought the final four jurors.

A final panel was tendered by the State, but none of the veniremen met the approval of the defense.

The trial drew a "full house" for the first time this afternoon, when bailiffs turned away a few who sought seats.

Dr. Wynekoop, the 63-year-old defendant whose ill health necessitated a mistrial last month, sat at the counsel table during the long session without showing any ill effects.

Drastic Steps Taken to Protect Royal Visitors.

Brussels, Feb. 20 (AP).—Rumors that a radical demonstration for a republic may be attempted during the enthronement of Crown Prince Leopold Friday led authorities tonight to take drastic precautions.

Officials also moved to assure complete protection for the Kings, Princes and other notables arriving for the funeral of King Albert I, Thursday, as well as the coronation or his son.

Prince Humbert, of Italy, on whose life an attempt was made last year, was reported to have arrived already.

THE flood of refined sugar into the United States today from the Philippines, Puerto Rico, Cuba, tells its own story of a commercial invasion throwing Americans out of work in ever-widening circles.

In 1933 alone, this increasing flood of refined cane sugar prevented the refiners of the United States from supplying the needs of 15,000,000 Americans. On April 18, 1932, Congress was informed by Petition that three domestic refineries had been closed and "the remainder are working on part-time."

What this represents in loss of employment to American workers may be judged by the fact that 19 U. S. refineries between 1922 and 1931 spent $231,605,137 in salaries and wages. They pay out for materials and supplies, including coal, oil and power, approximately one billion dollars in a normal ten-year period, furnishing business for many industries and employment for many thousands of our people.

This condition is the result of a Government policy that inadvertently encourages the construction and operation of refineries in the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Cuba, which are tropical producers of raw sugar. The policy assumed that these tropical islands would not duplicate United States refineries. The assumption has proved to be wrong. Tropical refineries hum; United States refineries work part-time.

The United States is the only nation today that permits sugar refined in the tropics to enter in competition with its home refiners. All other countries protect their refining industries and safeguard their home market from duplication of refineries even in their own colonies.

The United States provides the world's greatest market for raw sugar. For 200 years it has developed the manufacturing industry of refining sugar to meet the needs of an expanding country, serving it in every emergency.

No country can surpass the United States in modernness, efficiency and sanitary cleanliness of its sugar refineries. Experience demonstrates that the cane sugar industry attains its highest development by producing raw cane sugar in the tropics and refining it in the country of consumption.

Since N. R. A., the refining costs of United States refiners have increased greatly. N. R. A. does not apply to Cuban refiners, who also escape certain processing taxes, and also benefit from tropical labor and also enjoy a subsidy in addition!

A very small group of tropical raw sugar producers now demand United States quotas for their refined sugar to make permanent the unfair position they have secured recently in the United States market—thus permanently displacing American workers and the refineries in which tens of thousands of Americans have invested.

We cannot believe it fair to America for Congress to permit tropical manufacturing competition to jeopardize a home industry of such widespread benefit to our people.

Is The Guard Slipping?

When Gov. Murray's electric refrigerator developed temperament and unsavory fumes at 2:15 o'clock Monday morning, the redoubtable executive seized his telephone and called the fire department. Members of Oklahoma City's crack pump company dashed through the chilly night to the mansion, fixed the leaking pipe, and then sat down to a cup of coffee with the Governor—all of it with such nonchalance that nobody would have suspected that firemen are not accustomed to disposing of such matters.

We have no disposition to quibble with genius which has ways, however unorthodox, of getting things done, but what, we should like to know, has happened to the National Guard of Oklahoma? We seem to remember that "Alfalfa Bill" has used guardsmen to help settle an interstate bridge controversy, close down oil wells and collect tickets at a football game. Is it possible that a recalcitrant refrigerator is to the guardsmen of Oklahoma what Waterloo was to those of Napoleon?

All Right For Reedsville.

A sharp debate on the Administration's subsistence-homestead plan of relieving unemployment has failed to turn the Senate against it. In the House funds for operation of a Government furniture factory at Reedsville, W. Va., were eliminated from the Treasury-Postoffice appropriations bill. But the Senate restored the item on Monday, in spite of reluctant admissions from the sponsors of the bill that it would extend the Government's competition with private industry.

The PWA has allotted about $500,000 for the construction of the factory at Reedsville. Plans call for the settlement of several hundred families of unemployed miners on "subsistence homesteads" in this vicinity. Each family would have enough land to produce at least part of its food and fuel. It is anticipated that the breadwinner will have a part-time job in the projected Government workshop.

The subsistence homestead venture is put forward as an experiment in the decentralization of industry. But prospects of developing private industries in rural areas will not be demonstrated by establishment of a Federal plant built and operated with tax money and with an assured market for its products in the Postoffice Department. The real issue on which the two houses are divided is whether the Government shall go further into the business of manufacturing equipment for its own use, under the pretense of relieving the unemployed.

Several Senators attempted to justify the West Virginia project on the ground that something must be done for the "starving miners." Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, and Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, were much concerned about the "starving furniture workers" who would be deprived of jobs by this proposed Government factory. Their point is well taken. The mere diversion of work from private to Federal institutions can not be considered reemployment.

Rising Sap In Pennsylvania.

Lively politics in Pennsylvania are further assured by the announcement of Roland Morris, Ambassador to Japan under the Wilson Administration, that he will contest in the Democratic primaries for the Senate nomination. Opposing Mr. Morris will be Joseph Guffey, who, despite the popular notion, is not Democratic National committeeman, but is nevertheless the Administration spokesman and patronage dispenser for his State. Mr. Guffey will have George H. Earle, our Minister at Vienna, on the ticket with him, aspiring for the governorship. Mr. Earle seems to prefer Harrisburg to the Austrian capital.

The fact that two eminent Democrats are out for the Senate seat indicates that the hopes of that party run higher than ever. No Democrat has sat in the Senate from Pennsylvania since the Civil War, and only once in that period has there been a Democratic governor. This year, apparently, Senator David Reed is in line for a hard fight. He may even have a hurdle to take before he can get to grips with a Democratic opponent. From his retreat in New York, Gov. Pinchot said a few days ago that he might have something interesting to say very soon. It may be that his illness will prevent him from running; it may be that he will make the campaign. Close friends, according to Philadelphia newspapers, are not heartened over the prospect of his candidacy. If he does contest there will be a fight of uncertain outcome between two strong political factions within the Republican party.

The Democratic campaign promises to be exceedingly interesting. Mr. Guffey is regarded on all sides as the Roosevelt leader. He has been highly successful in producing patronage, according to reports. Moreover, he is said to expect at least the blessing of the Administration. But Mr. Morris may anticipate the support of the ardent Wilson followers and the Al Smith Democrats. The fight in Mr. Morris' behalf is being led by State Senator Snyder, of Allentown, and Sedgwick Kistler, of Lock Haven, the Democratic National committeemen.

Surplusage?

In the Executive order approving the newspaper code President Roosevelt was far from his happiest literary vein. He declared with a curious asperity that there is no intention of robbing the press of its guaranteed freedom of expression, although he felt that the inclusion of the so-called freedom-of-the-press clause was "pure surplusage." And he asserted, in a manner more inept than humorous, that the clause is no more appropriate to its context than would have been a recitation of the Ten Commandments. The protest against the guarantees asked by the publishers was strong. That is not the same as convincing.

The publishing of newspapers is the one large industry which has an advantage over others in possessing always a medium for the expression of its own opinion. But the high tradition of the American press is not merely to state editorial opinions. It is also to print what its opponents feel, even about subjects derogatory to itself. The wide publicity which the long-delayed newspaper code has received is evidence of this. Although the President's criticism of the newspaper industry in several places is unnecessarily caustic, probably every newspaper throughout the country printed it either verbatim or in extensive summary. In other words, the press, accustomed to giving punches, is also large enough to take them.

The code as finally signed, besides guaranteeing freedom of expression, includes the child labor clause which, we believe, is more satisfactory in its present state to publishers than to the President. It sets standard minimum hours for mechanical and clerical employes and it provides safeguards for continued existence of union contracts. The President insists that within 60 days the controversy over wages and hours for editorial and reportorial workers shall be satisfactorily settled. In substance, the code demands no more of the newspaper-publishing business than other accepted codes have demanded of other large industries.

Although Mr. Roosevelt's language was clumsy, an industry which is continuously critical of others will in few instances be so picayune as to resent criticism directed at itself. All that is asked of the Government is absolute guarantee that behind the phrasing of a regulatory code there lurks no semblance of censorship or dictatorship. Such a request is "pure surplusage" only if the importance of the issue is inadequately appreciated.

A Policy Needed.

At least two provisions of the three-point air-mail bill which is under consideration by the House Postoffice Committee argue their own merit. It is highly desirable, of course, that provision shall be made to permit those who have been deprived of contracts to bid again. To make that possible, it is necessary to amend the law of 1872, forbidding the submission within five years of bids by any one who has had a contract cancelled.

It is desirable, moreover, to remove the requirement that any bidder shall have had six months experience in operation of a regularly scheduled air line. Since so many established companies are ruled out, no firm, with one or two exceptions, could qualify under the present law, no matter how strong financially or how well equipped with personnel.

The third point provides a new relationship between the Government and the contractors, in that it is proposed to substitute a definite fixed price basis for the present poundage contracts. There is much to be said for a change in the subsidy structure; certainly the contracts can be put on a basis more satisfactory than that which permitted payment of inordinate bonuses to officials of the corporations. But the measure which has been advanced gives us no real subsidy policy; it is more or less hasty and haphazard.

It is fairly certain, from what President Roosevelt has intimated recently, that there is to be a reconsideration of ocean mail contracts as well as air-mail engagements. That reconsideration provides the Administration an opportunity to work out a general subsidy policy designed to eliminate all the abuses which have been revealed, set up a better relationship between the Government and the contractors, and at the same time preserve the purpose of the grant of aid to private operators hauling mail in the air and on the ocean. A mere change in the rate structure will not do that. It is, in fact, superficial treatment of a serious matter.

An Urgent Prerequisite.

In asking the House District Committee to restudy the whole system of taxation in Washington the Chamber of Commerce expresses what is believed to be a consensus of opinion here. Tax levies have been adopted in a rather haphazard manner. They bear heavily upon home owners, while some other groups do not contribute a fair share toward maintenance of local government. A general overhauling of these laws in accordance with modern principles of municipal taxation might serve the double purpose of equalizing the burden and making evasions more difficult.

It is questionable, however, whether such a survey should be made at this time. Previous efforts to adjust District taxes have resulted in the drafting of new levies and reduction of the Federal contribution to the budget of the Capital City. In fixing the Government's present meager contribution Congress was undoubtedly influenced by the Mapes committee, which devised four local tax bills about two years ago. Some members of the House seem unable to analyze the fiscal problems of Washington without considering ways and means of shifting a larger portion of the National Capital's budget to local residents.

A movement is now under way to restore the Federal contribution to the District budget to a percentage basis, as provided in the basic law. Senator King is sponsoring an investigation with this end in view, and members of the House subcommittee handling the local budget appear willing to participate. If Congress will reestablish a definite and equitable relationship between the Treasury and the District, taxes can then be adjusted to revenue needs on a basis that will be fair to all groups. And the inclination of Congress to substitute more local taxes for Federal support in maintenance of the Capital City will be mitigated.

"Why Don't We Spend?"

In a recent issue of "Mental Hygiene," Dr. Alvan L. Barach set himself the interesting task of analyzing the psychology of those who at the present time are refusing to spend as much as they can readily afford. His own patients provide the case studies from which he draws conclusions as to "our present excessive and sinister use of thrift."

They are men and women who have suffered no losses of income that necessitate a marked lowering of their living standards. Nevertheless, they have acquired a "depression psychology" which has led them to practice economy as a kind of self-castigation. In this way they exorcise a conviction of guilt induced by their secret knowledge that they are favorites of fortune. They even acquire a sense of virtue by dismissing servants, dispensing with customary luxuries, and in various ways helping to accentuate those industrial dislocations which are the unavoidable consequences of depression.

If this saved income had been devoted to the relief of distress, the indirect loss of employment caused by such spasmodic economies would at least be mitigated, although charity is no adequate substitute for work and wages. Dr. Barach says, however, that his patients have not been impelled to give their saved income to the poor. They are quite content to leave it "in the bank."

No doubt neurotic impulses such as those described are apt to be more strongly developed in persons seeking medical advice than in the average healthy individual. But many people know the sense of virtue which accompanies voluntary abstention from buying what one can afford. In its moderate and normal manifestations, this feeling acts as a safeguard against extravagance and a curb upon useless spending. As a mass manifestation, however, developed in the morbid atmosphere of a severe and prolonged depression, the saving habit may become a social vice, capable of seriously aggravating unemployment and retarding business recovery.

A Delicate Undertaking.

Twelve bills designed to extend the Government's authority to combat crime have been submitted to the Judiciary Committees of the Senate and House by Attorney General Cummings. Apparently they represent the Administration's promised coup against lawlessness.

Congress will be expected to cull these measures with fine discrimination, in spite of the general desire for more effective methods of dealing with organized criminal gangs. The foremost question in the mind of nearly every student of law enforcement is whether some of these bills would encroach upon the authority of the States sufficiently to weaken their own crime-fighting agencies. One bill would permit the States to enter into mutual agreements for the prevention of crime. This is certainly a step in the right direction. But it is only supplementary to the more drastic measures conferring power directly upon Federal officers.

Attorney General Cummings recognizes the dangers of encroaching upon the police powers of the States. These bills, he says, "are not intended to invite the political subdivisions of our country to refer their own problems of law enforcement to the Federal Government." Neither was the eighteenth amendment, but it failed because of overlapping authority and lack of popular support.

The difficulty of coping with the modern criminal who skips across State lines for the specific purpose of cutting off pursuit or employing legal technicalities can not be overlooked. As Mr. Cummings states: "Outlaws thrive in the twilight zone between State and Federal authority." More effective integration of State law enforcement agencies and the extension of Federal jurisdiction over crimes specifically interstate in character appear to be logical and necessary. Nevertheless, a sharp line of demarcation between Federal and State authority ought to be preserved, and Congress should avoid laying a foundation for future encroachment upon local police powers.

"A Time for Vigilance."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of February 7 entitled "A Time for Vigilance" is indeed a most timely warning, but it does not fully cover all of the field in regard to Treasury funds and the manner in which they are expended by some of the departmental heads in Washington.

I would suggest very careful attention be given to some of the methods the Director of the Bureau of Engraving has seen fit to inaugurate for the production of the new whisky and beer stamps.

For the past 15 years this class of work has been produced by a method known as the offset method in a most satisfactory, and certainly in a most economical manner, for I am reliably informed that if it were not for the savings accomplished by this method of printing the cost of running this bureau today would more than double.

On page 200 of the House hearings on the Treasury appropriation bill for the next fiscal year (1935), held on December 18, 1933, the director submitted the production costs of the various methods of producing revenue stamps (which, by the way, is the class of work the whisky and beer stamps come under) per 1,000 sheets, and as it is a matter the taxpayer must meet with "cold cash" I submit these figures and let them be the judge as to what method should have been adopted for their production by the director. The figures are: Flat bed, $53.76; rotary press, $15.96; offset press, $7.49.

From the official figures quoted above, and in view of the fact that the offset method can produce these stamps in an entirely satisfactory manner, I, as a taxpayer, wish to protest against the arbitrary method that the director has adopted by the selection of the expensive flat bed method in preference to the more economical offset process. In reviewing further these same hearings, we find that the director has asked for an additional appropriation of almost $400,000 more than his present allotment, and when questioned as to the reason for this, he stated it was necessary to cover the cost of printing these new stamps.

It seems quite obvious that here is a case of such downright contempt and disregard for the rights of the taxpaying public that something should be done immediately by Congress to put a stop to this unnecessary waste of the taxpayers' money, for a little plain figuring will prove to you beyond any question of doubt that the director, by his arbitrary action in producing these stamps by the slowest and most costly method (flat bed) of all, is actually forcing the taxpaying public to pay at least seven times more money than is necessary.

In the Event of War—

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The young men of today have had the fact brought home to them very forcibly that U. S. veterans are "treated like dogs" instead of being honored, as is the custom in all other countries, especially in Japan.

These young men who would ordinarily be the patriotic soldiers of tomorrow, have seen the veterans actually starving in the streets of our great cities. These young men know that the pitiful pensions of these starving veterans have been arbitrarily chopped off by their Commander in Chief, the President.

The answer is plain. When war comes—as it will, and quickly—America will have to raise a conscripted army of discontents, who are serving against their will—soldiers to whom patriotism is unknown.

Ask any experienced military man the question: What chance has a conscripted army when pitted against an army of patriots? History itself gives the answer, in unmistakable terms.

Japan started preparations for the great war against the United States long before the World War. Those preparations are about complete, even to the "warming up exercises" of her military and naval forces in China.

With Europe, South America and Mexico against us to a man, the dullest mind can see that the time is ripe for the launching of Japan's war.

As we will not fight, Japan will be forced to kick us into showing some sort of feeble defense; and the final kick is on its way.

Maryland Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I thoroughly agree with Mr. L. Wethered Barroll regarding Gov. Ritchie—for outside of his army of officeholders I have not heard a man or woman say they would again vote for him, and why should they?

It is to the credit of a young lawyer in Rockville that proceedings were brought to oust both Dr. Edmonds and Miss Lavina Engle as county commissioners because they were holding office illegally, but why has this lawyer not gone a step farther and brought impeachment proceedings against Gov. Ritchie, who is also holding office illegally?

The Constitution of Maryland is not a dead letter, although the governor has trampled upon it. The bill of rights clearly says that "a long continuance in the executive office of power and trust is dangerous to liberty and rotation in office is the best security of permanent freedom."

His henchman, E. Brooke Lee, has seen the handwriting on the wall and retired before the voters retire his chief, for they intend to vote for anybody that opposes the governor. If Howard Jackson runs he will sweep the State.

I look to see a coalition ticket in the field similar to the New York fusion ticket, and if that takes place, the officeholding fraternity will run for their lives to shelter.

I think Carlisle Bargeron is the best writer you have on your paper. Who wants to hear nice things about the Administration or any thing else if all is not well? No, let us have the truth no matter who it hits and let Bargeron write his stuff. He is the best-informed newspaper man in Washington.

A Man's Viewpoint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is usually the woman who has failed to make her own house a happy one who is seen so much in neighbors' homes. Very solicitous of the welfare of others, neglect of her own family and home means nothing to this type of woman.

Most any time she can be heard complaining about her spouse. He is this and he is that and, of course, the neighbors are all so wonderful. A woman of this nature is always generous, kind, and even overkind, to friends and strangers, but mean as hades to her own husband. The psychology behind this predilection is worthy of careful study.

Information Desired.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noted with a great deal of interest the article contained in the February 12 issue of The Post, concerning the recently inaugurated campagin to seek peace and understanding between so-called rival religions.

The article states that high schools, both public and private, will be asked to invite a Catholic priest, a Protestant miniter and a Jewish rabbi to address the student assemblies on this question during the week of Washington's birthday.

It will be interesting to note the outcome of this campaign and to learn how many schools and which schools will invite pastors of the three denominations mentioned to address the student body. In fact, the press of Washington would render a public service in publishing a list of these schools. L. D. W.

As Others See It.

Daily Dividends.

Perhaps in the new leisure the ancient alibi, "I didn't have time," will disappear. Possibly we are on the outskirts of a millenium in which there really will be time to play, to read, to think . . . to live as well as make a living. How will the hours freed from the tyranny of toil be spent? Will they be crowded with reflection's riches?

Much will depend on tools to cultivate the new leisure. Will there be enough books with their timeless treasures? What has the depression done to books and libraries? It has brought mental as well as physical undernourishment.

A new book tells what has happened to other books during years of stress. In "Our Starving Libraries" R. L. Duffus writes his studies of public libraries in ten American cities. His revelations are challenging reading. In every city Mr. Duffus found the public library seriously handicapped by diminished income at the very time it was called upon for increased service to readers with more time to read and more need for help on a wider range of subjects and problems. But everywhere he found librarians and their staffs rising gallantly to unselfish service despite slashed salaries. Yet this gallantry can not obscure the plight of public libraries.

Chicago provided the paradox of a Century of Progress being celebrated with an exposition costing millions of dollars, while the Chicago Public Library went without a book fund for the third consecutive year. The state of libraries in the other cities studied was not so dramatic, but was extremely serious in Detroit, Indianapolis, Louisville, Knoxville, Richmond, Baltimore, Brooklyn and New York. Springfield, Mass., on the other hand, was found to have treated its library better than other cities. Its library maintenance budget had been cut but slightly, and ingenious readjustments made it possible to meet added demands.

If the ten cities studied are typical of others there are bright spots and dark spots in the state of public libraries, but the dark spots predominate. Rounded recovery can not come until these dark spots are brightened. The vast capital investment in public libraries may be forgotten for the moment, to ponder rather what library service means to a community, in satisfying the hunger for knowledge, in enlarging understanding to meet new problems. Mr. Duffus suggests as a remedy for the conditions he found a revolt "against fiscal policies that cripple libraries." He adds:

"The banks of the world are gorged with capital that seeks a safe investment. The depression has at least proved that there is no safer investment, none more remunerative, and few more unmistakably conducive to the common weal than the provision and maintenance of libraries."

Here, indeed, is a field for gilt or even golden-edge investments. Dividends will be as certain as they are varied. No defaults need be anticipated. Dividends will not be passed. They will not be paid quarterly or annually, but daily. Perhaps, after all, the slump in libraries is an opportunity in disguise, an opportunity for generous and discriminating investments which will enrich life at a rate wholly disproportionate to the capital required.

BARGERON.

THE big air-mail scandal and all of its attendant ballyhoo may have excited our Government and our people, may have caused some of us to become almost as indignant as the French got over their pawnshop scandal, but so far it has not ruffled Mr. Walter Brown, our former Postmaster General, one bit. He is either innocent as the proverbial new-born babe or he is the most thick-skinned gentleman we have ever had in American politics.

While the Democrats have been getting red in the face, sometimes slightly hysterical and doing such silly things as rebuking Mr. Lindbergh, this gentleman's inner or outward consciousness has not been touched. Before the Senate investigating committee he is as placid as a clear, still pool. He appears, indeed, the only cool spot in the heat that has been worked up. To say that he is aggrevating to the crusading Senator Black is but to state an obvious fact.

• • • •

HE isn't handling the committee by the familiar lapse of memory method, either. He answers the questions put to him. His "I don't recall" responses, insofar as they apply to pertinent questions, are few and far between. What he is doing is following the course he followed when he appeared before committees during his term of office. He is being plausible. Right or wrong, he will go down as the most plausible gentleman we have had here for a long time.

It is impossible to say how it will all come out, of course. It strikes me that while the committee so far is not worrying Mr. Brown in the slightest degree, he is not getting the favorable headlines which the Republicans and the air-mail operators, more than he, very badly need. After all, there is the Administration blast of "collusion" out against them. Before either the operators or the Republicans will get anywhere against the Administration, they must get from under that.

• • • •

WE could all get at the facts in this great drama better if we realized that at the bottom of it is first a conflict in policy and secondly, the hunger of the Democrats to get the air-mail contracts or conversely. While out of office they coveted them as they coveted nothing else. They constitute one of the greatest bonanzas of governmental favor. Under the Republican policy, the Democrats claim, the subsidies flowed right back into the hands of a wealthy few. Under the Democrats, as they talk now at least, they would have given the bounties to the small, courageous operators, in most instances admittedly operating on a shoestring but who, I suppose, under the Democrats' plan, would have become rich. There was certainly money to be made in the business.

One must never forget that in this country we have two political parties, the Republicans "for the rich" and the Democrats "for the poor." A Democratic subsidy will, I take it, be to make some poor men rich. They probably won't make them so rich because they will probably cut the size of the bounty down.

• • • •

THIS in brief is what all of the fanfare and trumpeting is about. The burning of papers, the citing of men for contempt—all of this is incidental but highly important in keeping the matter on the front pages.

And, of course, the Democrats in order to get control of the contracts to carry out their policy, better or worse than the Republican one, had to have some justification. This they professed to find in "collusion" at a meeting the operators had here with Mr. Brown in 1930.

It will be well to bear in mind that they have not proved this yet. And seriously, I am beginning to have my doubts about it.

"The Virginian."

In the year 1902 our American novelist Owen Wister produced a story, called "The Virginian," which immediately became a best seller. Now most best sellers sell fast rather than long; their sale usually stops altogether after two years. But "The Virginian" continues to be a best seller; after 32 years, it is still in constant demand. The reason why it continues to sell is because it deserves to—it is an admirable novel, in plot, style, and characterization.

One of the incidents, however, that attracted a good deal of attention at the time, seemed to me overstressed by the author, although I understood his purpose. One man laughingly calls his friend a name that used to be unmentionable in print, although now ladies use it openly on the stage. The listener was amazed when the Virginian did not resent it; then, later, when an enemy called him the same name, the Virginian immediately became dangerous and said, "When you call me that, smile." President Eliot told me he thought that was a remarkably powerful episode in the novel. But surely one of the invariable signs of extreme intimacy, the absence of formality, is the playful insulting of those we love. Shakespeare knew all about it. Before there is the slightest shadow on Othello's love for Desdemona, he calls her "Excellent wretch!" in an entirely different tone from the terrible "Lewd Minx!" which comes later.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

The Island Within the Jew.

To account for the modern Jew—to explain his survival in the face of eighteen and a half centuries of more or less active hostility and to discover the sources of his present varied character—is a project never adequately attempted before the book in hand today. The Gentile has been incurious; the Jew has either glossed over or romanticized his origins. The result is an odd hiatus of learning.

Into this gap now steps Milton Steinberg, brilliant young rabbi of the Park Avenue Synagogue in New York, with a most admirable study entitled, "The Making of the Modern Jew" (Bobs-Merrill, $2.50). It is a singularly thoughtful and keen-sighted work, with no false notes one way or another that I could find. To the Jew who would understand his people and his position, and to the Gentile who would amend his ignorance, I can suggest no better book.

• • • •

Steinberg begins his story in 70 C. E. (Common Era), when the Jews were moved to all parts of the Roman Empire after the fall of Jerusalem. But the Jew was prepared for this exile—in almost every important city of the empire was a Diaspora (dispersion) community, its central Jewish life already adapted to the country it might be in. By this bridge the Jew made safe passage from Palestine to the world.

For five centuries Palestinian Jewry struggled on, without its Sanhedrin (supreme administrative body of the Jewish state) or its temple, but as the cultural center of the whole dispersed people. Then "the scepter departed from Judea," and the Babylonian schools rose to guide the Jewish world. When these declined in the eleventh century, through persecution, the people lost its last external cohesion and the Wandering Jew was a fact.

As an example of one Diaspora community, Steinberg takes the Spanish Jews. Until Spain's Visigothic rulers were converted to Catholic Christianity in the sixth century, the Jews lived in reasonable peace and security. Then followed a century of persecution "the fury of which demonstrates that Torquemada came by his fanaticism legitimately." In the eighth century the Mohammedan Berbers conquered Spain, and ruled it tolerantly. But it took nearly 300 years for the Jew to recover.

Then from the tenth to the fourteenth century "Spanish Jewry flowered into a culture so rich and variegated . . . that it has gone down in Jewish history as the Golden Age." Toward the end of that period the Christian kingdoms drove the Mohammedans from Spain, and there came a sudden change. "Nothing in history," says Steinberg, "is quite so ironical as the contrast between the Mohammedan and the Christian treatment of the Jew. By their very religion, Moslems were enjoined to intolerance. None the less, as a genral rule, they treated the Jew with liberality, generosity and tolerance . . . The very heart and essence of the Christian doctrine were ostensibly love and tolerance. In practice, no Christian love was wasted on Jews." There followed massacre and expulsion. Jewish liberalism died in Spain.

Confined to ghettos, the Jew knew nothing of the Renaissance. Even by 1750 his life was still essentially medieval, ingrown with his own traditional culture. That he kept this at all, that he actually subsisted on an idea through centuries of cruelty, is a most conspicuous contradition of Marx's theory of economic determinism.

Then, in 1789, came Bastille Day. The tide turned. The French Jews were enfranchised and Napoleon carried the edict across Europe There were setbacks in 1815 and 1849, but by 1900 "the mad game was apparently over for all time." The Jew had won legal emancipation.

• • • •

Today the character of the Jew is a diverse compound. From his life in the ghetto, from his intense dependence upon his own culture (the Mosaic law and its interpretations are far more liberal and humane than the average Gentile conceives of), from age-long repression and attack, he had been so compressed that an expansion, sometimes exuberant, is wholly natural. Yet even here he stands upon two unsteady stools—Judaism and the world. As Steinberg says, "He can never become a fully balanced being until this issue is resolved."

Twenty-five years ago the movement toward assimilation seemed the answer. But if there is one thing the Jews have seen in the Hitler regime (not to speak of anti-Semitism elsewhere in the world), it is "a stunning blow to assimilation everywhere." For the Jew in Germany had been almost completely assimilated. But to the uneducated German, and worse yet to the educated as well, that made no difference.

Anti-Semitism is now driving the Jew back upon his "island within." As to the upshot between his absorption in the world, his reassertion of identity, or an endless vacillation between heritage and outer society, one can only say, as does the good rabbi at the end of the book: "I am no prophet, neither am I a prophet's son."

The National Gallery

FLORENCE PRAG KAHN, Congresswoman from California. Nee Goldsmith, at Salt Lake City. Graduated from University of California. In 1925 succeeded to the House seat left vacant by the death of her husband, Julius Kahn. She is to the House what Mary Pickford is, or, at least, was, in the movie firmament, i. e., the universal favorite. As wit and jester she has no equal in Congress. There is no more popular diner-out. She does not pretend to rival Mary in beauty, but the above caricature is too unflattering. Practical politician, she is, too; very soft-hearted about war veterans. A regular Republican, no matter what happens, she is no less liked by Democrats on that account. Anyway, even if the caricature is—well, identifiable, Greta Garbo could not displace Florence Kahn in congressional admiration.

The Starnge Story of a Happy Race That Got Addled

By Robert Quillen.

A certain small island in the midst of the ocean was inhabited by a race of happy people who thought no other human beings dwelt on earth.

Their climate was ideal; their rich soil returned abundant harvests; and they were free of civilization's diseases and vices.

Their chief, who judged matters of controversy, was chosen by popular vote to serve until the end of his days; but he had little to do, for every individual on the island possessed all that he needed, and there was no occasion for envy or fear or strife.

The medium of exchange, which we call money, was lumber. Wood was the only building material on the island; and a man who had used the trees on his place, and needed a new barn, was compelled to exchange some commodity for his neighbor's spare timber or wait for his own trees to grow.

However, there was little barter, for there was little need of building. Each modest house was built to last for a century, and all alike were built for use and not for show.

In such a prosperous and contented land, it was natural that every man should consider his neighbor an equal. And this indeed was true, for there was no thought of class or caste and the most respected were those who had the most wisdom or skill or learning.

But one year a man who had many acres of timber built a steeple on his house. And the grandeur of it filled him with pride, so that he walked with his chin high and spoke like an important citizen.

Because he was proud, others felt belittled. They envied him. And some resolved to build steeples higher than his.

Soon lumber became precious. Men gave their entire crops for a few trees. Steeples rose higher and higher. And those with the highest steeples were most admired and most envied.

A small boy would say: "Why can't I go fishin'?" And his mother would answer: "Because you must study and learn how to build a high steeple and be somebody."

And a woman who once was happy would say to her man: "Why can't you build a steeple as high as the Smith's? That woman snubs me, and I'd rather be dead than live under a dinky steeple like ours."

So the people learned to envy and covet and hate and feel haughty or ashamed, and they sacrified honor and wisdom and contentment to build a foolish steeple a little higher than a foolish neighbor's.

Closed Schools Increase Fast Over Country

Million Pupils Expected to Be Affected by First of April.

(Associated Press.)

Research specialists of the National Education Association estimate that by April 1 closed schools in the United States will number 20,000 and the children affected by their closing will total 1,000,000.

It is this prospect of further reduction in already drastically curtailed educational facilities that has prompted educators to seek action by Congress to prevent "collapse of the American school system."

Nearly 2,000 rural schools failed to open last fall due to lack of funds. Some 18,000 rural schools are operating for less than six months, 700 of these being open less than three months.

Enrollments Increasing.

Changes in the public school situation between 1930 and 1934 show total enrollments up 3 per cent; high school enrollments up 24 per cent; number of teachers and principals down 5 per cent; average salaries down 26 per cent; total expenditures down 24 per cent; capital outlays down 74 per cent.

There are 860,000 teachers, principals and supervisors in the public schools of the country, some 450,000 of whom are in rural areas. This year, according to the survey, approximately half the rural teachers in the Nation are receiving an annual salary less than $750 and one in every five is receiving less than $450.

Salaries Held Low.

"Many city teachers also are below these levels but the number of such is not known at present," says a report of the research division.

"However, it may safely be said that of the entire public school teaching force at least one in every four is receiving annual wages below the minimum provided for factory hands under the blanket code."

Nonpayment of teachers' salaries was reported from cities and counties in 14 States, the total amounts owing to teachers ranging from $2,400 in Clayton, N. Mex., to $22,000,000 in Chicago. While city schools have not been hit as hard generally as rural institutions, the median reduction in teachers' salaries between September, 1930, and June, 1933, as reported by 363 cities, was 13.7 per cent.

Smallest Cuts in Big Cities.

The smallest reductions occurred in the largest cities; the greatest reductions in cities of 30,000 to 100,000 population. Further reductions are being effected for 1933-1934 in many places. The survey revealed, however, that a few cities are moving to reestablish former salary schedules.

City schools today employ 18,600 fewer teachers than in 1931. This is a reduction of 4.6 per cent for the Nation as a whole.

STREAMLINE RAILROAD TRAINS.

The cow stood on the railroad track—
Just why she never knew;
The streamline train flew by, and smack! . . .
Beef stew!

• • • •

Now we have a railroad train that will do 110 miles an hour. At 80 per hour the passengers stick their heads out and ask, "What're we stopping here for?"

• • • •

At a mile a minute it is practically blocking traffic.

• • • •

The Pullman Company engineers have turned out a streamline train for the Union Pacific. It includes a dining car. When a passenger orders a three-minute boiled egg he is 6 miles from the place he ordered it by the time he gets it.

• • • •

At present no sleeping car is included. The public is too jittery just now to sleep on a projectile.

• • • •

The drawbacks to a sleeper on a train doing 110 miles an hour, when, as and if, are obvious. Before a man could get into the top of his pajamas he would have reached his destination.

• • • •

It's no fun just getting undressed and then having to grab your clothes in your hand and jump off the train in order to avoid being carried three or four States beyond the disembarkation point.

• • • •

On one of these 110-mile-per-hour trains you would hardly have time to say, "Porter, make up my berth," before the conductor would be calling "All off!"

• • • •

They really don't run this Union Pacific train. They just aim it and fire.

• • • •

And there is no locomotive whistle, as we understand it. A whistle on that kind of train would be like putting a bell on a lightning bolt.

• • • •

They send this type of train out with a small crew and a big prayer.

• • • •

• • • •

And in case of a tie-up they send the flagman back on a motorcycle.

• • • •

The eyes of the railroad and passenger world are on the Union Pacific, but only Ben Turpin can tell where it went.

• • • •

But, after all, there are people who think the railroads misinterpret the public requirements. The choo-choo designers think the passengers want speed when all they are really yelling for is a little ventilation, a 75-cent lunch and a rule against the man across the aisle taking off his shoes.

JUSTIFIED.

Possibly that shelling of apartment houses in Europe was originally directed at some tenant who went to bed and left the radio on all night.

A Salem, Mass., woman feeds her cows beer mash and says they thrive on it. In that State is it legal to serve a cow beer standing up or must it sit down at a table?

Ima Dodo thinks that Kate Smith and Katherine the Great are the same person.

Roger Babson thinks that the country's greatest need is character and that the President should include in his Cabinet a Secretary of Character. In a portfolio like that you can imagine how self-conscious a man would feel.

Ellen Wilson Homes Seek Dissolution

Group Unable to Secure Necessary $25,000 Capitalization.

Unable to complete its $25,000 capitalization, the Ellen Wilson Memorial Homes, Inc., yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to permit it to dissolve and distribute money now in the treasury.

Four officers, Charlotte Everett Hopkins, Florence H. Harriman, John Ihlder and Corcoran Thom, signed the petition. They disclosed that Congress, in incorporating the organization, required that it have $25,000 fully paid-in capital before it could function.

There is now in the treasury $18,922.17. It is on deposit in the American Security & Trust Co. Persons who contributed will probably be paid back more than their original amount by reason of interest accruals.

The organization was formed for the avowed purpose of providing "sanitary homes for the working classes." It was designed as a memorial to the first wife of the late President Woodrow Wilson, and was to have carried out her expressed wish that the slums of the Nation's Capital be cleared away. Nothing was ever done because of the inability of the corporation to secure its required paid-in capitalization.

Radio Waves and Ripples

COUSIN ARCHIBALD failed to greet us at the door with shrieks and sticky fingers when we came home for lunch yesterday. That alone would have been sufficient indication that all was not right, had there not been an almost deathlike stillness throughout the house. The kitchen was deserted. The radio was silent, though it was the hour for the Arlington time signals. Assembled unhappily before it was most of the family.

None spoke. Uncle Lemuel glared at a worn patch in the carpet. Mother eyed him fearsomely. No one paid any attention to Cousin Archie, who was giving the goldfish some exciting moments by shoving both hands into the bowl. Finally, Uncle Lemuel spoke.

"I'll change my will," he said. "She'll get nothing when I'm gone," he said.

Irreverently, at this point, we wondered if Uncle Lemuel would ever go. He'd outlasted three wives already, and it was generally suspected that he meant to take another.

"My own sister, my own flesh and blood," he continued, ranting.

Uncle Lemuel was sorely vexed. All the women on his side of the family had been meek, hard-working females who well understood how to prepare hardy victuals that kept the life blood running strong in their mates far beyond normal expectation.

We knew he was talking about Aunt Sadie, but we were not at all prepared to discover sitting alone in a corner of the room Mrs. Herringhoffer, the butcher's wife, quietly sobbing.

Had we not been so sure that a mutually perverse taste in radio listening and Aunt Sadie's admiration for Mr. Herringhoffer's adroitness at short-wave tuning were their only ties, we should have been pleased at the tardy, subtle entry of romance into her life. As it was, however, we considered the entire affair an affront to our judgment.

Columbia's commercial department jumped ahead of N. B. C. last month with a gross billings increase of 47.2 per cent over last January, while the best National could do with its Blue network was a 29.7 per cent boost, while the Red hopped 26.1 per cent.

Total billings for the C. B. S. month were $1,386,072, as compared with $1,300,708 for N. B. C.'s Red and $975,299 for the Blue. January's total for C. B. S. was the largest for the month in the chain's history—3 per cent ahead of the previous record of $1,348,842 for 1932.

C. B. S. may break all records with its February time sales. The month that now holds top place in C. B. S. history is March, 1932, when gross billings were only slightly above last month's total. With several new advertisers beginning shows, the month's billings may easily shoot to an all-time high.

N. B. C. was proud of its arrangements of microphones in the Senate caucus room which permitted questions and answers at the antilynching hearing to go on the air with such horrible clarity yesterday, horrible because some of the witnesses spared no details in describing our better hangings. Seldom is anything so gruesome broadcast, excluding, of course, the Crime Club and Secret Service dramas.

Lowell Thomas offers radio listeners a rare opportunity to send telegrams and make long distance phone calls collect. He wants us to tell him if we've been enjoying his broadcasts after his Friday night program.

The softest job in National's Radio City is held by the man who stands by with a piano in case one of the Washington programs runs short.

National is shortwaving descriptions of King Albert's funeral rites and the coronation of King Leopold tomorrow and Friday.

Announcers will follow the solemn cortege bearing the body of the King through the streets of Brussels to the historic Cathedral of St. Gudule and back to the royal chateau at Laeken, where the body will be placed in a guarded vault. The procession and the service at the cathedral will be broadcast from 6 to 7 a. m., the burial rites at 8 a. m.

In the preface to a one-volume edition of his plays published in 1931 Sir James M. Barrie wrote that he had lost all recollection of writing "Peter Pan" and sometimes doubted his authorship. This feeling, he said, was strengthened because the manuscript was unaccountably missing.

Now comes a theatrical press agent with the information that Maude Adams has revealed that the manuscript was given her by Barrie more years ago than she cares to remember.

A lady who has been bed-ridden for six weeks called this department yesterday to tell it how much she has been enjoying WMAL's broadcasting of "Heinie and His Grenadiers." She found him quite by accident, she said, and now tunes him in regularly, liking both his voice and his music.

Party Today At Lee Home For Children

Mrs. John Kennedy Opens Mother's Residence for Day.

Film Show and Treasure Hunt to Entertain Classmates.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The home of the late Mrs. Arthur Lee at 1708 Massachusetts avenue will be opened tomorrow afternoon for the second time this winter. Mrs. John Kennedy, the former Bruce Lee, will give a large party in celebration of George Washington's Birthday for her two small children, Lee and Stoddard Johnston.

Several weeks ago when Mrs. Kennedy's brother, Mr. Henry Davis Lee, and his wife, were here on a visit from their home, Lone Mountain Ranch, near Patagonia, Ariz., they stayed in the house which has been closed since it was vacated last year by the Turkish Ambassador, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy entertained at a large tea dance for Mr. and Mrs. Lee in the Massachusetts avenue home during their stay in the Capital.

Children's Festival.

Tomorrow almost 100 children, including the members of the first grade at Potomac School where young Lee is a pupil, and the members of the fourth grade, friends of young Stoddard, and other friends whom the two children know at dancing school, will gather for an afternoon of celebration.

There will be movies for the young guests including an "Our Gang" comedy, and several animated cartoons of the well-loved Mickey and Minnie Mouse. Later the children will have a treasure hunt on the two upper floors of the house, where each will search for a present marked with his or her name. After this exciting game is finished a hot supper will be served.

The parents of the small guests will arrive later in the afternoon to accompany their children home, and Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy will divide their duties as hosts between children and parents.

An Able Hostess.

Mrs. Kennedy is especially qualified to entertain a large group of children, for several years ago she opened Gracelands, the home of her mother, Mrs. Lee, at Elkins, W. Va., for the summer, and there she had as guests for the season, the children of many of her friends and their nurses.

Thus interesting herself in the study of child psychology, she helped her friends, who, knowing their children were safe in skilled hands, were able to enjoy summer vacations themselves.

Mrs. Kennedy is the granddaughter of the late Senator Henry Cassaway Davis, of West Virginia, her mother having been Grace Davis. The late Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins was the sister of Mrs. Kennedy's mother, and former Senator Davis Elkins is a cousin of Mrs. Kennedy.

Antique Spanish Trunk in Search Of Owner Here

Tropical Flowers Brought to Capital Store to Companion Fruits.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

One hundred and seventy years ago a master craftsman completed a leather trunk, which he sent to the Mayor of Cuenca, captital of the Province of Bolivar, Ecuador, high up in the Sierras of the Andes. It bore the words, "Soy del Alcalde canton al Don Juan Saltos, anno 1764." (I belong to the mayor of the town, Don Juan Saltos, year 1764.)

Generation after generation this was handed down in the Saltos family until lack of funds caused one member to sell it a few years ago. It passed from hand to hand until finally it was bought by an American, a lover of heirlooms. It was carried to his home and given a place of honor among the other antiques and curios

But once again the old chest must change hands. The collector would sell it to someone who can cherish it as he has.

It measures 34 inches by 18, 16½ inches deep. Although blackened with age, it takes a high polish and shines with gloss of good leather. Hand-tooled floral designs intermixed with fantastic curlicues indicate that it was made by one of the pupils of the old Spanish padres, who taught the natives such exquisite handiwork.

Although it has passed through the vicissitudes of years, there is still the original hand-wrought iron lock and clasp which made it the treasure chest of Don Saltos in 1764. These in themselves are very valuable.

We will be glad to give the name and address of this collector to anyone who calls.

Lightweight Massages.

When the figure is right, even the simplest clothes are charming. But, the figure—there's the rub. Or rather, for the figure, there's the new massager, an instrument weighing less than a pound, but capable of erasing many surplus pounds.

It was invented by a practicing masseur of Rochester, Minn., who uses it with great success. Now a Washington shop is featuring it so we can have it for our own private use.

Here is a case of the mountain coming to Mahomet, now that we may have a professional massage any time we wish, right in the privacy of our own boudoir.

The petite massager is much used for reducing, but it does many things besides. It is said to relax tense, jumpy bundles of nerves in neck and back, to stroke the soreness out of strained, stiff muscles and "charley-horses."

Windblown Gloves Arrive.

Spring gloves are taking a hint from the newest suit styles and are developing into windblown fantasies. An F street shop which always manages to have whatever "is" in gloves has just received some models of this advanced fasion. One look convinces us our spring wardrobe can't be without them. There are some black kids with wide windblown cuffs, white appliqued with black curlicue figures. These spread over the coat sleeve, will add a definitely jaunty finish.

And then there are the plainer heavy fabrics in brown, blue, white and string color which have the flaring gauntlets ornamented with a single button. These are neatly handstitched up around and about the fingers and side seams.

How to Be a Clubwoman.

The willy-nilly runs which appear and do not disappear from our hose keep many of us forever on the look-out for bargains. The minute we find one we dash to the phone, call up so-and-so to spread the tidings of great joy.

This time, let's reverse the process. We found a bargain, but suppose you do the calling. We'll tell you where and why.

There's a local shop which has hose of excellent wearing quality. And not only that, they are sponsoring a "hosiery club." You join by purchasing one pair, and along with them you are given a membership card, showing you have made this purchase. Each succeeding pair is marked and when you have made 15 purchases the shop gives you a pair—gratis.

There are several different kinds of hose priced within comfortable reach of short purses. Some of them selling for 59 cents are delightful for everyday street wear when we want to look well, but at the same time like to practice economy.

Home-Made Snow.

The snowball scraper which has made its appearance in a G street store inspires us to newer and more novel drinking recipes.

The odd little metal cup-like gadget scrapes the surface ice to snowy fineness. In this form it may be used to frost beverages, or can be served with a fruit flavoring poured over the top of it. Price 25 cents.

Bath-Dressing Room Is Easily Created

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

Why not begin the spring rejuvenation of your house with the smallest room, the bathroom? Bright new color schemes and smart accessories come within the limits of reduced budgets and are effective ways of making the bathroom decorative as well as utilitarian.

Pink and silver is used throughout one bathroom which has been converted into an attractive bath-dressing room with a few simple changes.

The wallpaper, which is waterproof, has a candy pink background with a scattered design of silver stars. This has been applied above the wainscoting.

Tailored Chintz Drapes.

The same colors and pattern are repeated in the straight, tailored chintz drapes at the window. This wallpaper and chintz ensemble is a very smart new note in decorating, which the wallpaper and material designers have cooperated to produce. The repetition of pattern also gives an illusion of space in the small room by keeping the backgrounds unified.

An adjustable dressing table is another interesting feature of the same bath-dressing room. It can be pulled in or out of a shallow closet on slides attached to the doors and rests on a shelf when not in use.

Marbleized Linoleum.

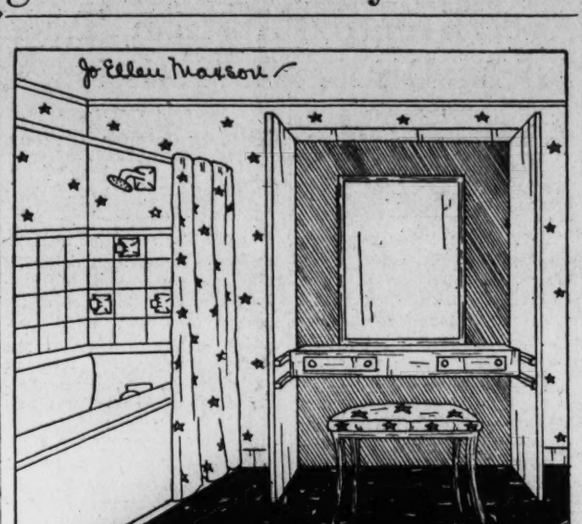
Colorful new equipment for the bathroom also includes matched sets of clothes hampers and wastebaskets in a wide enough variety of designs and colors to harmonize with any background.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.



How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Three-fourths of the children in the public schools have already had measles. This may not be true of the rural districts, but it is of the places large enough to have a school health service. Since, practically speaking, no one has a second attack of measles, only one child in four need have any special consideration where the disease breaks out in the neighborhood, and yet it happens from time to time that some school is disrupted by a measles epidemic.

There is something wrong with the system if a hazard that concerns only a minority of one in four can operate to deprive temporarily the majority, three in four, of their opportunities for schooling. This hazard can be somewhat guarded against by keeping in the school a contagious disease record which indicates the pupils susceptible to measles, and by having those protected by one of the methods of immunizing against measles.

About one-half the children in the schools have already had whooping cough and therefore can be exposed to that disease with safety. The other half are endangered occasionally by schoolroom exposure. The school can be protected somewhat against breakdowns due to epidemics of whooping cough by keeping a record of the disease of every pupil and by concentrating care on the susceptible when epidemics of whooping cough develop in the neighborhood. A school health service is of great help in protecting against epidemics of this disease. The vaccines for whooping cough are in the experimental stage.

Nearly one-half of the pupils are found to have had chickenpox. Epidemics of this disease are important, because smallpox sometimes gets a foothold by being mistaken for chickenpox. Occasionally genuine chickenpox is a severe disease. The methods of protecting are good.

Mumps is a disease of adolescents. Less than one-third of the pupils in the grades have had it. To the schools of that level mumps is not very important. It is more of a menace to boarding schools; while in recruiting camps for armies it is one of the outstanding menaces.

Scarlet fever is far less prevalent. Only about one-eighth of the children have had it when they come into the schoolroom. Even at that epidemics of scarlet fever rarely break up schools. A health service is guaranteed against that.

In the old days about one-tenth of the pupils had had diphtheria when they entered school. Now that immunization against this disease is becoming general the school authorities do not think of it as a menace. When immunization of young children passes the half and half level the schools can afford to dismiss diphtheria from their list of sources of apprehension.

Fruit Is Hostess' Next Friend for Decoration of Dinner Table, Susan Mills Says, Describing Several Effective Ways of Preparing It.

By Susan Mills.

So far as decorative beauty is concerned there is scarcely anything one can serve that is as effective as fruit. In a bowl in the center of the table, to be looked at through the formal dinner and eaten later, fruits are as appealing to the eye as the loveliest hothouse flower. In little cocktail goblets waiting at each place, fruit will allure a guest into impatient anticipation of the courses to follow.

There are many ways in which to serve them, from the most carelessly severed orange on the breakfast table to the most fanciful cocktail at dinner. If these cocktails are cold and the fruit fresh and properly served the dinner will begin well and once begun any hostess knows that the worst is over.

A charming fruit course consists of a mound of powdered sugar in the middle of a glass dish, surrounded with plump red strawberries thoroughly washed with the hulls left on. The berries should be placed with the points downward.

Coping With Grapefruit.

The popular melon dishes can be varied. Take a strip of a honeydew melon, arrange balls of watermelon and cantaloupe on the crescent-shaped slice, alternating the colors. The green, red and orange make a colorful and tempting dish.

Try a combination of melons cut into balls, add a little powdered sugar and a dash of rum, and see what a flavor it will make.

When it comes to preparing oranges or grapefruit for cocktails or salads most cooks wilt despairingly before the process is over. The tenacious little membranes will not leave the fruit segments, the segments are stubborn and will not fall into the bowl in a whole condition. Here's a hint: Peel the orange or grapefruit with a sharp knife, much in the manner you would peel an apple. Be sure the inner white skin is removed. Then slip the point of the knife between a membrane and the segment, a twist of the wrist and the segment falls out, whole. If the fruit is prepared this way there is no breakage and no loss of temper.

Other Kinds of Cocktails.

Charming fruit baskets can be made of grapefruit or orange skins. After removing the fruit and membranes the shells can be filled with combinations of fruits, grapefruit with Malaga grapes, skinned and seeded, or oranges with maraschino cherries, sliced banana and a few drops of sherry, oranges with crushed mint leaves.

Fruit cocktails are, of course, most welcome for summer dinners, but their attractiveness is not limited to any season.

Many people prefer, in fact, demand if possible, an oyster cocktail. A delicious sauce for these is made of 1 tablespoon horseradish, ½ teaspoon tabasco sauce, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon tomato catsup, ½ teaspoon salt, mixed and placed on ice before using.

It might not be a bad idea to prepare a quantity of this sauce and keep it in readiness for emergencies. One never can tell when a sauce of this kind may come in handy. It can be served with oysters, clams, shrimps or lobsters in a cocktail.

While on the subject of seafood cocktails, one might remember that Sauternes may be served with them. The wines should be slightly cold, and may be served from the bottle or decanter.

As all chefs say, "Now that wine is back, we will have better cooking." And it is true, as well, that we will have better accompaniments to foods.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

While returning to London after visiting Lord Edward Keynsham, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British home secretary, is abducted, taken to a building resembling a prison, placed upon a gallows and told he will be hanged unless he grants a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be executed the following morning for murder. A message arrives that Mrs. Brandt is waiting at Rossiter's home to give him fresh evidence. He is released, hears her story, promises a reprieve—and faints as he lifts the telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. When he regains consciousness he learns Brandt has been hanged.

On her way to Rossiter's home for dinner, Mrs. Brandt vanishes. Rossiter disappears. Scotland Yard is called. Young Detective Pank learns that Lord Edward engineered the abduction of Rossiter the night before Brandt's execution. Rossiter and Mrs. Brandt return. He tells detectives he and Mrs. Brandt went into hiding to escape from a mysterious band, of which Keynsham supposedly was a member. A key was sent to Rossiter by Brandt. The gang make desperate efforts to obtain possession of the key.

Keynsham rejoins his associates in France. He tells them Brandt sent the key to Rossiter as a matter of vengeance against his associates in the international ring.

"We are all in the same boat," Keynsham said gravely, "and let me tell you this—because it is the truth—I never liked Brandt and he never liked me. He was not a man to be trusted. He didn't understand our code of honor. He didn't understand my personal code. He knew that for years I have admired his wife. I don't need to tell you that he had no cause for real jealousy in that. No woman could have lived with Brandt and have continued to feel any affection for him. On the other hand, she and I, though we met sometimes, met absolutely as friends and nothing more.

"For some reason or other Brandt believed that he would find me in his house that Sunday he returned. He didn't. There was never any question of my being there. He found that poor little actor fellow, engaged in a perfectly harmless discussion with his wife on business matters, and he killed him. He was a foul-tempered, evil-thinking fellow, and I say that although he's dead. • • • You know what that meant to us—Brandt being locked up. It was his year for taking charge of our safe—we had taken it in turn for years, and there had never been any trouble. Three times I tried to obtain an interview with Brandt to get the key. He refused to see me.

"Three days before he was hanged, with all the influence I could command, I did everything I could to approach him. He still refused to see me. His dying act was the most sinister, the most unsportsmanlike, the most vicious thing possible. He sent that key to the Home Secretary on pretense of making him executor for his wife. That's how the key came into Sir Humphrey's possession. That is where, for the first time since we started the most amazing enterprise this generation has known, we find ourselves in danger—in real and terrible danger.

"I had my hands on the fellow's throat once," Van Pleyden muttered. "If we hadn't been interrupted he would have told the truth."

"Probabilities or possibilities are off," Keynsham pointed out. "That key is now beyond our reach. The only way of attempting even to gain possession of it would be by means of a series of cold-blooded murders. That does not come into our scheme. It never has come into our scheme. It never shall."

"What are we to do, then?" Sam Clowes drawled. "Sit down and wait for what's coming to us?"

"Nothing of the sort," Keynsham rejoined. "What you have got to do is to accept the inevitable and trust in me. I want you, Bowman, and you, Sam, and you, Van Pleyden, to clear off by that boat tonight. I want the marquis to remain here quietly, where he spends most of his time, on his own estates. I have a plane at the airdrome here, and I shall leave tonight for Le Bourget and cross over, if I can, at dawn. I shall be in London tomorrow, and I promise you that if there are any means in this world, short of murder, of obtaining that key or of getting our records back, I will adopt them. I have ideas. I have something to go on, because Katherine Brandt, when she knows the whole truth, will be on our side. All that we have to do is to see that the home secretary does not turn that key. If it can be done, I shall do it."

Marquis Calls Servant.

The marquis clapped his hands. There were more glasses and a strange little silence, during which the butler served wine from another flask thick with dust and cobwebs. They sipped it thoughtfully—the marquis' head thrown back, his eyes closed, his rather prominent Adam's apple protruding, his expression that of a man indulging in a reverent orgy of appreciation.

"It is divine," he pronounced. "There is nothing else like it in the world. The Mouton Rothschild was a wine for the gods, this is a wine for us • • • Gentlemen, I propose that we leave our business in the hands of Lord Edward Kenysham. He has been the presiding genius of our organization, he has seen us all restored to fortune and great wealth under his beneficent guidance. Now that trouble has come we should be fools indeed if we did not trust in him."

"I'm with you," Van Pleyden assented "We will abandon any further campaign in London and leave the matter in your hands. I will sail tonight with Sam and Bowman. This fruit-carrying craft of ours, marquis, I presume has wireless?"

"Naturally," the latter agreed. "The best and finest installation."

"We leave then," Van Pleyden continued, "on the understanding that if Keynsham should fail, we are permitted to alter the destination of the steamship. I know a place where we should be safe for a time until we could hear from England and know how to make our plans."

"It is agreed," Keynsham declared. "I shall leave for England myself in an hour or so. I only regret," he added, "our forthcoming disruption. Against treachery from any living person we were prepared and insured. Against the dead ours must be a more subtle flight. If the marquis will lend me a car, I will go and see how my mechanic is getting on. The sooner I am back in London the better."

They all trooped out to see him off, wrung his hands and watched the cars depart down the long ribbon of road, a straight line through the far-spreading plain of vines.

"A great leader of a mighty enterprise," the marquis murmured, a note of admiration in his tone. "He kept the spirit of warfare alight in us and filled our pockets."

"A fine fellow," Van Pleyden agreed. "All the same, I'm glad that it is he who is going back to beard that old Johnny and not I!"

Chapter XXIX.

Curious passers-by came to the conclusion that the home secretary must either be giving an evening party to commence at a later hour, or that he was entertaining the foreign delegates from a particularly restless country who were making London their headquarters for the moment. There were two plainclothes policemen outside each of those long, low windows abutting almost upon the street, which had been the cause of so much trouble; there were two uniformed policemen at the front door, and, if they had been able to see into the mews, they would have found another two guarding each of the back entrances. For once the house in Chestow Square was amply protected.

In the library was an atmosphere of storm. Two men—Col. Matterson, the subcommissioner of Scotland Yard, and Sir Humphrey Rossiter, the home secretary—both desperately angry, faced each other in significant silence. There were coffee, cigars, cigarettes and liquor spread out upon the sideboard. Not a thing had been touched. Neither man was smoking. Sir Humphrey stood on the hearthrug in a characteristic attitude, calmer than his companion but with his mouth set in rigid lines, and a steely look in his eyes. Matterson, with less self-control, was also standing, his face flushed, his hair a little disordered, a dark frown upon his face. Traffic in the square outside was usually negligible toward nightfall, and the silence in the room was all the more noticeable in the absence of any sound from without. It was Matterson who at last resumed a very heated discussion.

Demands Course of Action.

"May I take the liberty of asking, Sir Humphrey," he demanded, "what would be your course of action if I should give orders for the arrest of Lord Keynsham on his arrival?"

"I should look upon such a proceeding," the home secretary replied, "as an act of insubordination on your part. I should at once order your men to release Lord Edward, and, if they refused, I should impose upon them the same penalty as I should certainly exact from you. My authority in this matter must not be disputed."

"Do you realize, sir," the subcommissioner proceeded harshly, "that the box which Lord Edward is so anxious not to have you open until his arrival contains, without a doubt, the clew we need to enable us to hunt down the Lombard street murderers?"

"What it contains is not, for the present, your business," was the firm rejoinder. "That box is part of the estate of a man for whom I am acting as executor. I intend to accede to Keynsham's request and open it in his presence. The administration of justice can be in no way affected by a few minutes' delay."

"You have forgiven his lordship, then," Matterson inquired cuttingly, "for putting you through that degrading exhibition at Norwich which brought on your illness?"

"The matter is in abeyance," Rossiter replied. "I require a fuller statement of his motive."

"You have forgiven him for your second disappearance, during which your house and the apartment of Mrs. Brandt were burglariously entered and ransacked?"

"My second disappearance was entirely voluntary," Sir Humphrey explained. "My impression is that Lord Edward, whether rightly or wrongly, acted in good faith with a view to saving my life and the life of Katherine Brandt."

"Impossible Situation."

"The situation is absolutely impossible," Matterson declared, angrily. "Do you realize, sir, that the young man who made his way into this house by means of a stolen key, and who shot Pank, was in league with Keynsham? Not only that, but the men who brutally murdered Grimmett's manager and the liftman at Lombard street were also members of his gang."

"I fear that that may be the case," Sir Humphrey acknowledged calmly. "Nevertheless, I am determined to hear what he has to say."

"Hear it afterward, then," the other begged. "At the present moment you are under proper and adequate police protection. I take the liberty, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, of saying that it is your duty to open the box and permit us to examine its criminal records before any one else has a chance to tamper with them."

Early Spring Hat Brims Roll Gayly Off Brow So Eyes and Foreheads Should Be at Best

New York, Feb. 20.—How's your forehead these days? Are your eyes in good smiling condition? Because your first spring hat is almost sure to show them. Its brim will roll right back, caught by that same wind which is sweeping new motion into all spring fashions.

Look at that Breton sailor at the left in the illustration. Rolls up gently all around . . . no chance to hide a frown under that brim. And even the classic straight sailor that seems born to go with suits has an upward curl at the edges this season.

Bretons Turn Gob.

Then there's the Breton that rolls so flat against the crown that it loses its nationality. Stops being a French sailor and begins to look for all the world like an American gob hat. You know the type—round, high cuff just barely letting the crown show over the top.

We have diplomats among the rolling brims, too. Knowing that you're used to that hat-down-on-the-right feeling, many of them give it to you. Roll off-face but with a decided twist toward the right side. Not so hard to get used to. The Napoleon bicorne at the lower right is one of these.

In contrast to them, there's the out-and-out, frankly exposing roll brim which is pushed 'way back so that it looks like a halo.

One-Sided Roll.

Another young brim is the side roll effect which you see at the upper right. This will be popular with those who have a good left profile.

In order to do all this soft rolling and twisting, you can see that hats must be made of soft, light materials. Toyo straws, bakus, fine ribs, burlap and linen-like weaves. Or woolly straws for casual, sports hats.

As to color—those excellent "go-withers," brown and navy and black will still be most worn. Though here and there you'll see Chinese red putting a lively accent on a dark or neutral costume. Or a vivid Kelly green.

Hats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

For the most part, though, these early hats get their gayety in bright quills or ribbons, or ornaments of metal and composition. Not that they really need any cheering up . . . since those merrily rolling brims give a happy lilt to any costume.

Greta Garbo Inspires New Fashions Keyed to the Queen's Taste

By JANE STUART

"To the Queen's taste" is a fashion dictum this season, but of all the glamorous queens brought to the screen none is more thrilling than "Queen Christina" as played by the incomparable Garbo. All over the country smart young girls are going "Garbo," wearing her strikingly boyish collars and cuffs, with "an ascetic, ecclesiastic, seventeenth century glamour," which is a new way to define 1934 chic! In Lansburgh's neckwear department you will find half a dozen smart variations in Christina collars. There's the white pique with frog fastenings and big gilt buttons, and elbow-deep cuffs, which sells for $2 (three sets were sold half an hour after they were put out on the counter Saturday). There's the starched linen collar, exactly like she wears in the picture, and it's only $1. If you want a combination of puritanism and feminine allure, choose the big one in crisp white organdy!

If you're "suit minded" this Spring, and of course you are, for suits are a big fashion, you could add a ton of smartness to your wardrobe with a Christina suit. Lansburgh's has the one with the tuxedo front, and the one with the white pique collar and cuffs.

With your suit, wear one of the simply tailored Christina blouses of silk crepe . . . white, or rich, deep colors . . . and three guesses as to their price. Wrong. They are only $3.95.

I must tell you about a Junior Miss dinner dress of sheer black . . . very Garbo-esque, very flattering, with an immense white organdy collar that frames your face enchantingly, and billowing sleeves with white organdy cuffs.

But if you want to know more about the "Queen Christina" fashions, and can't get down town to shop, call me at DIstrict 7575, and I will tell you more about them.

Bring out the Garbo in you with this Spring coat of navy wool crepe, with striking collar and cuffs of white pique, $25

New Attitude On Marriage Is Advocated

Head of Guidance Service Tells Essentials for Happy Unions.

Holds Society Must Alter Its Approach to Old Problem.

A Marriage Recipe.

1. Financial understanding between contracting parties.
2. Provision for recreation and diversion.
3. Intellectual comradeship.
4. Sexual compatibility.
5. Mutual spiritual evaluations.

Society must reorganize its approach to marriage if the ancient bark is to ride the storm of conflicting modern influences.

At least five points must be gravely considered by the two contracting parties if the modern marriage is to be an enduring success, according to Mrs. Joy Kelsey Sherk, director of the Marriage Guidance Service of the Old Stone Church in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mrs. Sherk, here to conduct discussions at the second annual conference on marriage and home life, which opened yesterday at Calvary Baptist Church, cited the five requirements she believes necessary to sustain marriage in a modern world.

"Life-wide" Importance.

"In the past we have placed too much stress on the life-long phase of the marriage relationship and not enough emphasis on life-wide aspects," said Mrs. Sherk. "That's one reason why marriages have been failing so terribly."

"At Old Stone Church we advocate thoughtful preparation for marriage. We emphasize five distinct points.

"First, time must be given to work out complete financial cooperation, so there can not be the slightest misunderstanding between husband and wife on income and expenditure.

"Second, provision must be made for recreation and diversion. After marriage there are inevitable arguments and conflicting points of view. If these are not speedily and amicably resolved, drop them. Seek diversion—play golf, go to the theater, see a movie. Come back to the matter later, if necessary. Diversion has everything to do with creating the best mood for arbitrating differences.

"Third, there must be intellectual comradeship, if there is to be the mutual intellectual and spiritual growth together. Women default more than men in this respect.

Sex Understanding Vital.

Fourth, before the church assumes the responsibility of wedding a man and woman, it must acquaint them with the technique and the necessity of achieving that physical adjustment essential to psychic, emotional and spiritual unity. Throughout history the church has always been too fearful of dealing frankly with the all-important subject of sex in marriage. We know now that the largest percentage of divorces arise from lack of sex understanding.

"Fifth, mutual appreciation of spiritual values in life and in marriage are necessary. There must be a meeting of minds between husband and wife on religious and philosophical matters. This does not mean, necessarily, that both must hold the same religious faith—but they must agree on intangible values. Different denominations erect no spiritual barrier between enlightened minds.

"Once a couple has grasped these five points essential to successful marriage, they tap effortlessly all the resources of society for building a congenial and healthful human relationship. Their interests become life-wide, and so unified that they are of necessity lifelong."

Averting "Casual" Unions.

Because marriage is such a significant event in human life, Mrs. Sherk believes in making a wedding a significant occasion for the bride and bridegroom. She thinks that marriages casually entered into are a grave mistake.

For four years she has been assistant to the pastor of Old Stone Church in Cleveland—that city's equivalent of New York's famous "Little Church Around the Corner"—and has viewed with dismay youngsters who strayed in from the courthouse, clad in careless garments, and asked to be married.

The last year, however, Ohio has passed a law requiring the lapse of five days from the time a marriage license is applied for until the day of the wedding. And the church makes diligent use of this five-day period in seeking to awaken in the prospective brides and bridegrooms a realization of the gravity of marriage.

Dressing for Marriage.

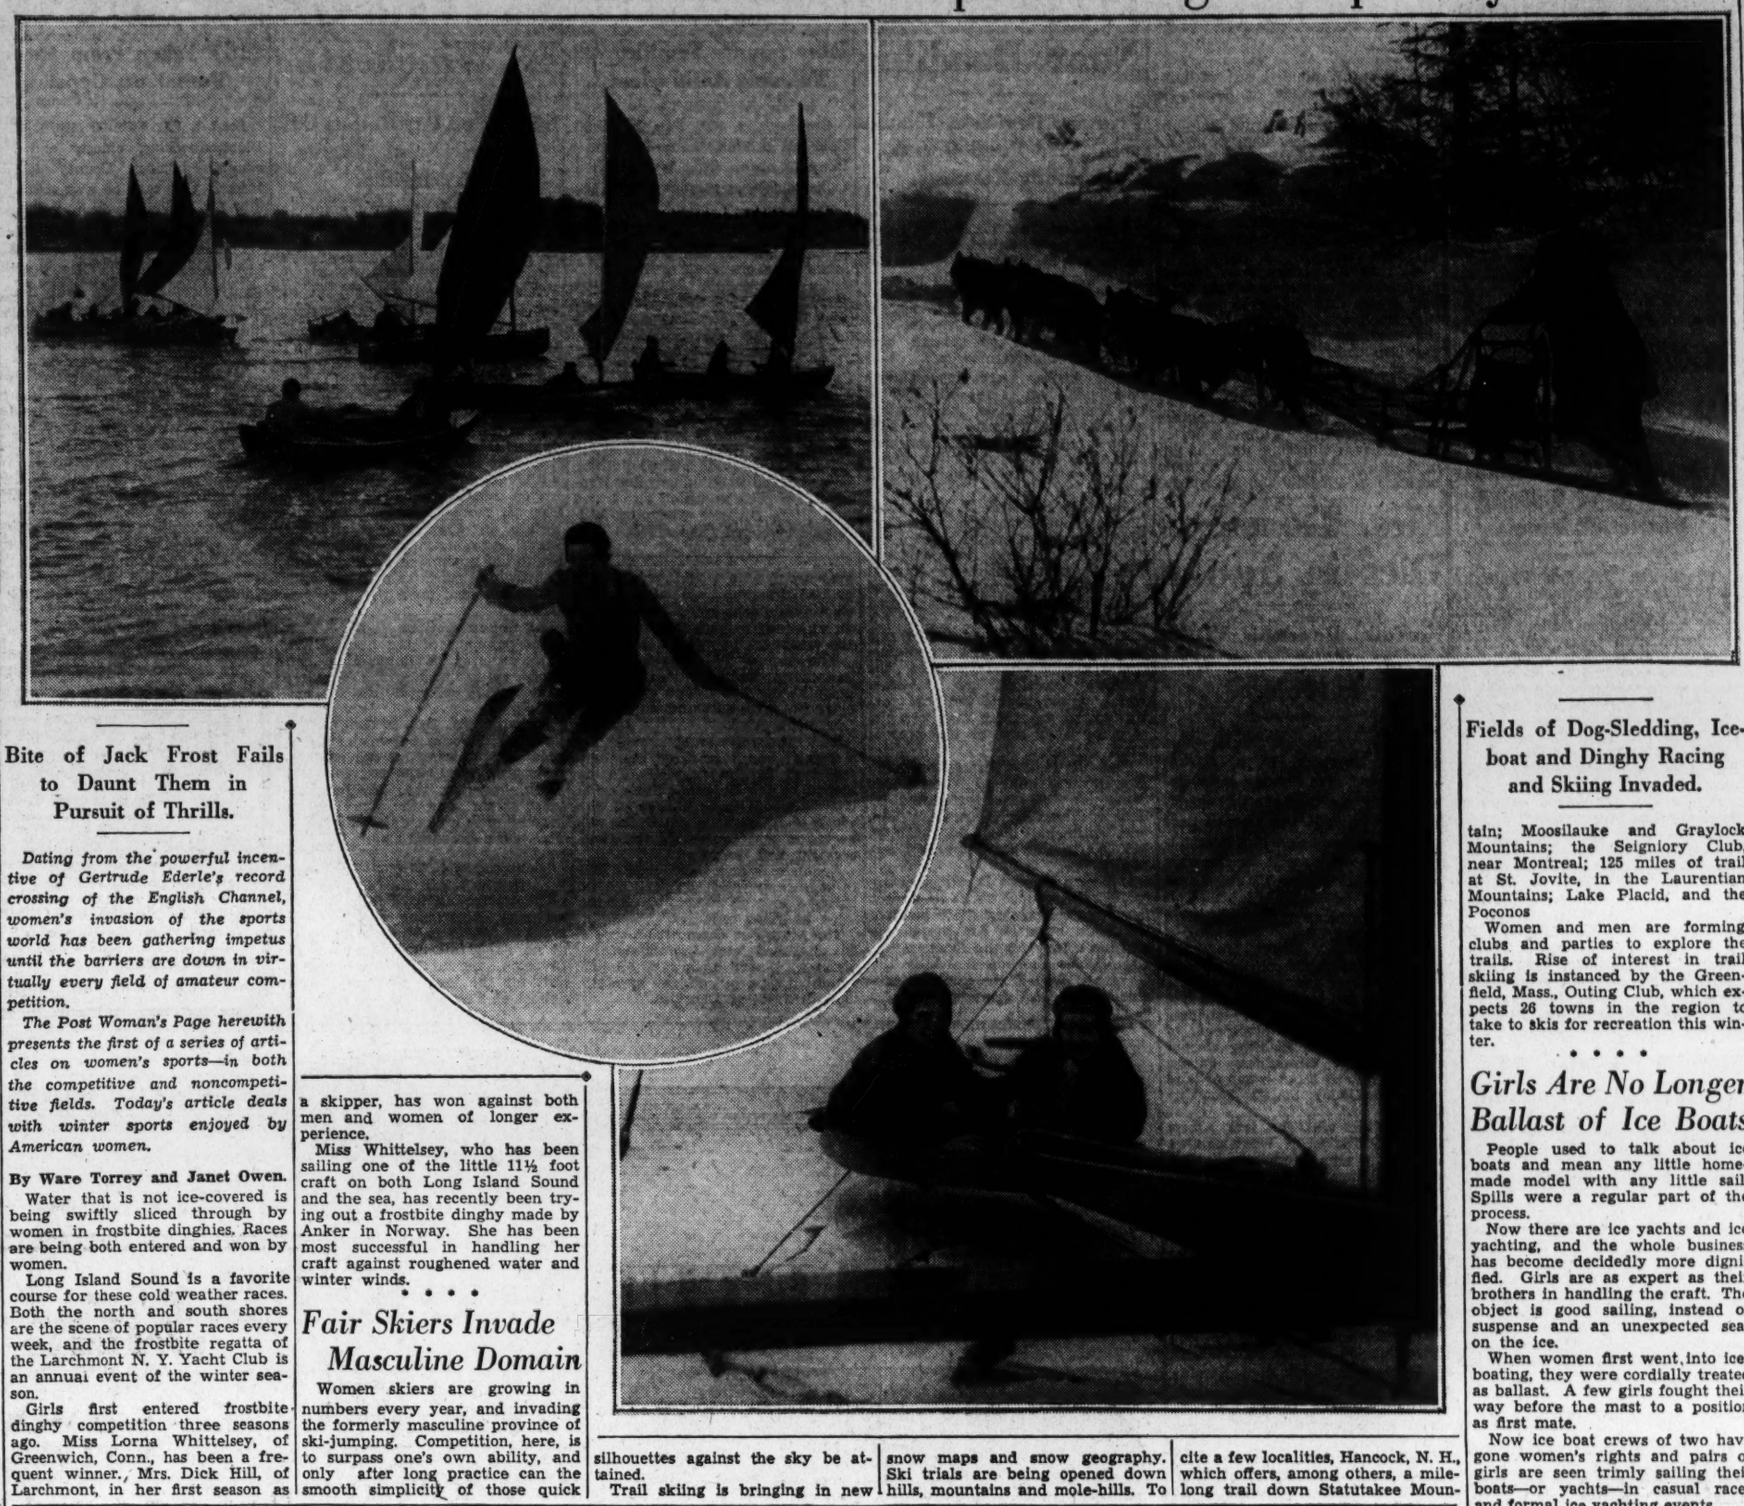
"We try to make each wedding as eventful, as significant and beautiful as we can," said Mrs. Sherk. "Our church is near the courthouse and attracts a great many couples who would otherwise be married by a justice of the peace. I feel it is very important that one say one's marriage vows in a church or a temple.

"What one wears to one's wedding is important, in that it reflects what the occasion means to oneself. We encourage the conventional idea of a train, a veil, bridesmaids, with family and friends present.

"I can not feel that a girl who comes to be married wearing a wind-breaker coat, or down-at-heel shoes, or just any old dress, is doing justice to herself, to her prospective husband, or to the significant relationship she is entering into."

A girl was recently wed at Old Stone Church whose mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother all had been married there. For 120 years—since Cleveland was a village of 400 population—couples have been coming there to be married. Recently, the record has been as many as 12 couples a day on some days.

Women and Girls Score in Winter Sports Long Usurped by Males



Bite of Jack Frost Fails to Daunt Them in Pursuit of Thrills.

Dating from the powerful incentive of Gertrude Ederle's record crossing of the English Channel, women's invasion of the sports world has been gathering impetus until the barriers are down in virtually every field of amateur competition.

The Post Woman's Page herewith presents the first of a series of articles on women's sports—in both the competitive and noncompetitive fields. Today's article deals with winter sports enjoyed by American women.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Water that is not ice-covered is being swiftly sliced through by women in frostbite dinghies. Races are being both entered and won by women.

Long Island Sound is a favorite course for these cold weather races. Both the north and south shores are the scene of popular races every week, and the frostbite regatta of the Larchmont N. Y. Yacht Club is an annual event of the winter season.

Girls first entered frostbite dinghy competition three seasons ago. Miss Lorna Whittelsey, of Greenwich, Conn., has been a frequent winner., Mrs. Dick Hill, of Larchmont, in her first season as a skipper, has won against both men and women of longer experience.

Miss Whittelsey, who has been sailing one of the little 11½ foot craft on both Long Island Sound and the sea, has recently been trying out a frostbite dinghy made by Anker in Norway. She has been most successful in handling her craft against roughened water and winter winds.

Fair Skiers Invade Masculine Domain

Women skiers are growing in numbers every year, and invading the formerly masculine province of ski-jumping. Competition, here, is to surpass one's own ability, and only after long practice can the smooth simplicity of those quick silhouettes against the sky be attained.

Trail skiing is bringing in new snow maps and snow geography. Ski trials are being opened down hills, mountains and mole-hills. To cite a few localities, Hancock, N. H., which offers, among others, a mile-long trail down Statutakee Mountain; Moosilauke and Graylock Mountains; the Seigniory Club, near Montreal; 125 miles of trail at St. Jovite, in the Laurentian Mountains; Lake Placid, and the Poconos

Women and men are forming clubs and parties to explore the trails. Rise of interest in trail skiing is instanced by the Greenfield, Mass., Outing Club, which expects 26 towns in the region to take to skis for recreation this winter.

Girls Are No Longer Ballast of Ice Boats

People used to talk about ice boats and mean any little home-made model with any little sail. Spills were a regular part of the process.

Now there are ice yachts and ice yachting, and the whole business has become decidedly more dignified. Girls are as expert as their brothers in handling the craft. The object is good sailing, instead of suspense and an unexpected seat on the ice.

When women first went into iceboating, they were cordially treated as ballast. A few girls fought their way before the mast to a position as first mate.

Now ice boat crews of two have gone women's rights and pairs of girls are seen trimly sailing their boats—or yachts—in casual races and formal ice yachting events.

Feminine "Musher" Proves Mercy Angel

Dog teams play a part in more vital events than races—and it is not always a question of serum.

Women drive their teams in races and purely for recreation. Mrs. E. P. Ricker, of Poland Springs, Me., is shown above enjoying a trek over the snow. But the teams are used in addition for trips that are both sporting and efficient.

A nurse was needed recently by a patient at the point of death in a remote section of the New Hampshire mountain country. Because of the blizzard-bound hills a dog sled was the only possible means of transportation.

Mrs. John Milton Seeley, of Wonalancet, N. H., drove her team of 11 dogs 22 miles against a northeast gale, over drifts of the heaviest snowstorms New Hampshire has known in a generation. An expert with dogs and sled, Mrs. Seeley transported the nurse in time, and then when her duties were over took her back on the long trek to her headquarters near Chocorua Mountain.

Beauty Shop Code Called Public Need

Evils of Cut-Rate Places Exposed by Spokesman for Trade.

Clients' Safety and Health at Stake, Declares Miss Emme.

Miss Edna L. Emme, secretary of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists, who is in Washington to present the code of fair competition for the beauty shop trade, said yesterday that all the members of this profession were eager to safeguard the beauty business as it represents the interests of modern women.

"Our proposed code is to end unfair trade practices endangering the safety and health of clients," she declared.

"A few years ago the woman who made frequent visits to beauty parlors was looked at askance. But today the woman who doesn't brings on herself the same brunt of criticism.

Protection of Patrons.

"When you take into consideration the hundreds of women every day who put themselves in the hands of hairdressers and cosmetologists, it becomes apparent how important it is to insure them high-grade treatment.

"The code which we have drawn up is directed against cut-rate shops which employ inefficient held and do not maintain sanitary conditions.

"There are a great many unsuspecting women who never realize what danger they are risking. Suppose for instance a woman read of a place where she could have a permanent wave for—almost next to nothing, let us say. She might jump at the opportunity. But if the person who gives the wave does not know her business the client risks severe injuries.

Wage and Other Abuses.

"There are shops I know of who employ helpers for as little as $1.60 a week. The type of person employed for such an amount scarcely needs to be described.

"There are shops of the same caliber that reuse their permanent wave supplies time after time on first one person and then another. Some of them even use towels over again."

Miss Emme explained that it was this state of affairs that made a beauty shop trade code essential.

"We must, if possible, make it mandatory for shops to hire only trained help, to pay a minimum wage of $15 a week, and in all cases to sterilize instruments," she said.

She also pointed out that this trade had been one of the chief means of improving the status of woman in the business world today.

Canceling Marks of Age.

"Formerly many women were barred from jobs because their age was so apparent. But nowadays a woman with gray hair can do to a beauty shop, have her hair dyed and look 10 to 15 years younger.

"Women with prematurely gray hair often suffered unjustly too. So many men are so undiscerning that the minute they see a woman with white hair they conclude she must be a grandmother. Victims of this hasty judgment can now very easily have treatments which place them within their proper age limits.

"Professional women who are out in the business world meeting hundreds of people every day find it necessary to keep up their personal appearance. It is in a way a means of livelihood to them. Naturally they turn to the beauty parlors for help.

Effect Upon Husbands.

"And then there are the wives. They're really up against it in a great many cases. Their husbands see women all day who make efforts to improve their appearance, and to be attractive looking. When they return home in the evenings it's quite a let-down unless their wives keep the same standards.

"It's simply up to the modern woman to bring out her good points and cover up her bad ones, and the only schools where she can learn to do this are—the beauty parlors."

Miss Emme said these reasons made it essential for the beauty trade to give the highest quality of treatments.

"Naturally we all try individually to maintain our ideals for the business, but the cheap shops offer unfair competition. However, our code is a weapon which we hope to use with unqualified success!"

Knitters Puff As They Purl Infinite Yarns

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

Knit one,
Purl one,
. . . puff two . . . and the busy modern knitters are off at their favorite indoor pastime. Ash trays appear beside needles and balls of yarn in the cozy corner a downtown shop provides for workers in wool. Incongruous curls of tobacco smoke persist, but do not interfere with progress of the clicking needles. Fashion sublimates utility in the slow shaping of the garments. Young knitters talk of color, line, contrast, dashing effects. Older workers reminisce about war time socks by the score, about the homemade chest protectors for grandfather, and the coverlets for cradles of babies now grown.

Almost any day Mrs. M. S. Szymcak is among the knitters, fashioning smart wearables. In an intricate lacy stitch, Mrs. J. B. Himmelheber has made a knitted evening gown. Cheery Mrs. Betty Collins finds time nearly every day to visit the industrious group. She is one whose needles' activity has brought genuine comfort and pleasure to two or three generations, relatives and friends.

Thrills Are Relative.

A small person who does a big job is Miss Pearle Cramer, one of the very few women ever to have appeared before the August Interstate Commerce Commission. From 1887 to 1914 no woman appeared before the commission in formal session, and since 1914 only infrequently has an intrepid woman been recognized.

Not more than 5 feet tall, Miss Cramer's diminutive size emphasizes her femininity among the scores of men who are her fellow-workers. But her identity as "practitioner" and "party of record" is as clearly registered as that of any towering man about the commission.

Her "biggest thrill" didn't come from her professional success, Miss Cramer says. It came on the day when in her first private office, in a back room of a Pennsylvania avenue building, she bought, as she expressed it, "a whole dollar's worth of 2-cent stamps." Even her name in large letters on the office windows, now "up front," failed to be as significantly important to little Miss Cramer as were the stamps in the first large quantity she ever bought.

Over the Teacups.

Favors for ladies at the last bachelors' cotillion were so attractive that a woman guest called one of the bachelors to ask for an additional favor for a friend. The additional cotillion souvenir was so easily obtained that the same guest asked a few days later for four more of the trinkets from the ball.

"Why is it that one of your guests has returned five or six of your favors?" a department store saleswoman asked the bachelor who has so generously given the favors. "Didn't she like them? She traded them in for other merchandise."

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If February 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 8 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m.

If you were born on February 21, possibly it may be advisable not to let a very positive nature reflect itself in your manner of speech. One can easily get into the habit of overemphasizing ordinary conversational statements. There are occasions when stressing remarks so as to convey finality, or a definite viewpoint, justifies emphasis. You might find, however, by being too emphatic, when talking, it rubs people the wrong way, as they get the impression that you are trying to dominate the conversation.

People born on February 21 are inclined to be rather "finicky" about their personal appearance.

Successful people born on February 21:

Ebenezer R. Hoar, Attorney General under Grant.

Elizabeth R. Thompson, philanthropist.

Alice E. F. Palmer, educator.

George L. Tracy, composer.

David Tod, lawyer.

Virginia Senate Passes Liquor Control Bill

Move for Legislature to Central Board Beaten; Rum by March 15.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 20.—After 17 years of fitful repose John Barleycorn will emerge from his Virginia tomb by March 15.

His return was presaged today when the Senate approved by 37 to 3 a liquor control bill banning the bar room in any guise and establishing a State-operated dispensary system. Dry localities will be permitted to hold local option elections.

Leaders announced they would demand prompt House concurrence in Senate amendments. Gov. Peery indicated he was pleased with the measure. The bill will become effective 15 days after the Governor attaches his signature.

Bootleg Purchaser Unregulated.

Before final action the Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, Front Royal, to prevent the purchaser of illegal liquor from being equally guilty with the bootlegger. A move to have the Legislature elect the three-man control board was rejected.

A compromise may solve the House and Senate dispute over salaries of board members. The House stipulated they should be paid a flat $5,000 each a year, while the Senate ruled they should receive up to $7,500, the exact figure to be set by the Governor.

House proponents of political subdivisions sharing in dispensary system profits announced they would accept a Senate amendment under which the State would get the first $1,675,000 with two-thirds of the remainder, if any, to go to the counties and cities.

The only negative liquor votes were cast by Senators Roland E. Chase, Clintwood; Lloyd M. Robinette, Jonesville, and Henry T. Wickham, Ashland.

Senator Weaver obtained a 26 to 12 vote on his amendment stripping judges of authority to imprison the buyer of bootleg whisky for a year and fine him $500.

Against: Battle, Chase, East, Gilliam, Hillard, Miller, Mosley, Norris, Rogers, Smith, Walter and Wicker.

Senator W. Worth Smith, jr., Louisa, sponsored the amendment designed to place appointive powers of board members in the Legislature instead of the Governor. The proposal was defeated, 33 to 6.

Smith then lost by 30 to 9 a move to require legislative confirmation of the Governor's appointments.

Establishment of a dispensary at Colonial Beach was believed assured when the Senate approved an amendment to permit local option elections in all towns with a population greater than 900.

Meanwhile, the House passed a bill to force appointment of trial justices in all counties. They would replace mayoralty courts.

The House Finance Committee voted by 8 to 7 to favorably report a measure to tax physicians $255 a year. Opposition witnesses included Drs. John A. Gibson, Leesburg, and G. F. Simpson, Purcellville.

Jesse C. Suter, Washington, urged the House Privileges and Elections Committee to indorse a resolution intended to grant suffrage to District of Columbia residents. Action was deferred.

Bill Would Prevent Evasion Of Gasoline Tax in Virginia

Richmond, Feb. 20 (Spl.).—A bill to curb bootlegging of gasoline into Virginia will be introduced in the Assembly soon by Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, Staunton.

Many motor truck operators, Moffett charged tonight, have evaded payment of the 5-cent State tax by purchasing their fuel in the District of Columbia and neighboring States, He said:

"It's a flagrant steal. Virginia has been defraunded out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue."

The Staunton delegate said he was undecided on details of his bill, but would insist on stiff penalties for violators.

"We built these roads with gas taxes," he added. "Trucks from other States are receiving a great privilege when they're permitted to drive on them.

"It may be necessary to inspect all trucks when they enter the State and when they leave to see that they don't evade the tax by carrying auxiliary tanks. They should pay for their wear and tear on our roads.

"If we punish a few of the operators, they may quit filling drums with gas in other States before entering Virginia. I know a lot of truck-drivers who buy all their gas in Washington at night and do their business in Virginia the next day."

Assembly Gets Flood of Bills Near Deadline

Primary Revision, Change in Road Fund Grants, Among Requests.

Richmond, Feb. 20 (AP).—Bills providing a new method of allocating secondary highway funds, revising the State primary election machinery and taxing stocks of foreign corporations were tossed into legislative hoppers yesterday—the last day for introduction of general bills other than finance measures.

Both houses were flooded with new legislation as 181 bills—128 in the House and 53 in the Senate—were offered for consideration. Less than three weeks remain for consideration and most of the major legislation of the session is still pending.

Delegate Berkeley D. Adams, of Charlotte, introduced the secondary road bill, which would require the highway commission to consider a county's expenditures for interest and sinking fund payments on road bonds in allocating secondary road money.

Ashton Dovell, floor leader and chairman of the privileges and elections committee, introduced the primary election law revision, which would enable political parties to set up their own election machinery in lieu of the present State primary.

The bill to tax stocks of foreign corporations held in Virginia 50 cents per $100 was introduced by Senator Lloyd M. Robinette, of Lee, who estimated it would bring in $400,000 to the State treasury annually.

Delegate Samuel D. Rodgers, by request, introduced three important measures concerning the control of the State hospitals for the insane and the colony for the feeble-minded. Under one of the bills the Governor would name a commissioner of mental diseases for a six-year term, who would be a doctor of medicine and a specialist in psychiatry and who could have no interest in any private sanatorium for the treatment of mental diseases.

The second bill would provide that every person admitted to a State hospital for the insane would receive the same accommodations and treatment.

The third bill would provide for a special board of three members for each of the hospitals, to be named by the Governor The special boards would have charge of the separate institutions under the supervision and control of the General Hospital Board.

Delegate Adams introduced a bill to require physical property to be assessed in each county or city the same as other property.

The State Fee Commission would be abolished and Commonwealth attorneys placed on a salary in an administration bill offered by Maitland Bustard, of Danville.

Coal and Cold

Mine County Families Are Freezing Amid Plenty.

Cumberland, Ky., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Coal all around them—but not a lump to burn. That is the way it looks to jobless persons of this section.

A committee talked with Charles Pendry, Harlan County relief administrator, on behalf of those seeking coal allotments. The committee says Pendry told them there is no coal money for Harlan County people, as an agreement had been made in Louisville "that since Harlan County is a coal mining county, people there would need no coal." They say he further informed them that if they wanted coal they could go out and pick it up, "anywhere you can find it."

Refusal to provide coal or clothing was reported to Administrator Hopkins in a petition which also asked that State Director Thornton Wilcox be removed from office.

130 on CWA Jobs Laid Off In Winchester

Winchester, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—One hundred and thirty men employed on civil works projects in Winchester have been laid off on orders from Federal headquarters, it was announced today by Frank W. Bailey, CWA administrator.

The reduction leaves but 65 men, or one-third of the original number, employed.

It is expected, however, that a cut in the Frederick County CWA pay roll will be made soon.

Richmond, Feb. 20 (AP).—Faced with the notification from Washington that Virginia will have only $500,000 more to expend for materials on Civil Works projects, State Administrator William A. Smith has recommended that localities seeking funds submit proposals which will call for little or no materials.

At the same time, J. M. Ribble, chief engineer of the State CWA, said he was recommending two types of projects which required only trifling expenditures for materials.

Danville, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—The local civil works administration is gradually tapering off the employment lists here. The pay roll last week, however, was $8,951, somewhat larger than the week before because of "supplemental pay rolls." This was distributed among 626 persons.

Richmond, Feb. 20 (AP).—The Warren County School Board today applied to the State Public Works Advisory Board for a loan and grant of $42,857 for the construction of an $8,000 elementary school at Riverton, and a $34,857 additional unit for the Warren County High School at Front Royal.

'Gypped'

$157 Taken From Farmer Found on Gypsies.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—J. R. Blankenbeckler, elderly and substantial Johnson County (Tenn.) farmer, who said he was robbed of $157 by a gypsy woman yesterday, had his money back last night.

Blankenbeckler told Sheriff Karl Madron, of Mountain City, that two gypsy women asked him for a match. While one was talking to him, he said, the other picked his pocket.

Sheriff Madron and deputies cornered the gypsies at the foot of Holston Mountain, on the Bristol-Mountain City highway, and brought them to jail here.

Blankenbeckler identified the women, told what denominations his money was in and even how the bills were folded.

His description tallied with money in the gypsies' pockets and they paid over the money. Because the women were the parents of eight children, Blankenbeckler didn't prosecute, but declared he would leave gypsies alone "for life."

Virginia Power Decision Nears

Coal Operators Accuse Old Dominion Company of False Reports.

Richmond, Feb. 20 (AP).—An early end to the rate case which has been before the State Corporation Commission since August, 1932, was in prospect today following submission of supplemental briefs by opposing counsel on rates charged by the Old Dominion Power Co. for electric power sold to coal operators.

Using vigorous terms, attorneys for the Virginia Coal Operators Association, asking lower rates, charged the power company had filed false reports with the commission.

Power company counsel termed this brief "scurrilous" and obtained permission to submit a supplemental statement in answer to it.

Marked differences of opinion as to the value of the company's present properties were expressed. Power company representatives said the value is not less than $3,390,000.

64,000 Here Given Relief From Hunger

Wintry Winds Add to Burden; Coal and Food Distributed.

Weekly Cost Mounts to $50,000, Halbert Report Shows.

Dwelling from hand to mouth in shanties built of egg crates and discarded packing boxes, in crowded tenements and in houses of severe red brick and moldering wood, approximately 16,000 families are dependent wholly or partially upon the District Division of Emergency Relief this winter for a bare existence.

Each family averages four persons, L. A. Halbert, supervisor of the relief agency, asserted yesterday, so the total of persons whose daily bread comes directly or indirectly from organized charity is about 64,000. Yesterday 1,200 tons of coal were deivered to the needy. But this fell below the figure for Monday, with 1,305 tons distributed.

Each successive sting of winter adds hundreds to the rolls, for many who have found outside work through the CWA, other relief projects or private firms are kept indoors.

Weekly Cost $50,000.

During the week ended January 27 there were 13,292 families being cared for at a weekly cost of $43,488. Figures for the week ended February 3 jumped the number of families to 13,869, though the cost to the District was about the same. Next week 14,924 sought aid, and the week erding Saturday saw the number increased to 16,000, and the weekly expenditure to $55,000.

Since the first of last July the Relief Bureau has expended $1,805,000. Naturally, officials pointed out, in summer the expenses are less and dependents fewer.

Only a fraction of the money expended weekly by the division is for salaries. There are 466 persons on the pay roll, but all except 100 of these are employed through relief measures themselves. The pay roll amounts to $34,000 weekly, and much of it going to persons who otherwise would be dependent on the division for relief.

The division gives most of its relief in the form of cash. Every two weeks the average check amounts to about $8.50.

Just Bare Living.

Besides the financial relief, dependents receive coal, surplus foodstuffs and sometimes surplus clothing.

Last week a shipment of 3,000 dozens of eggs became rare delicacies on the tables of the needy. The eggs are a monthly feature of the relief fare. Other necessities distributed last month included 5,280 tons of coal, 100,000 pounds of smoked hams and bacon and three carloads of lard and butter.

Fare is Meager.

All other provisions purchased by the destitute with relief funds are bought at chain stores. The average fare in the home dependent on charity for maintainence is humble.

Breakfast usually consists of grits, coffee or tea, bacon and bread. Dinner may see potatoes, beans, rice, hominy, chicken giblets, pork giblets, or stew on the table. When luncheon is eaten at all, it is composed of leftovers from dinner.

"The strange thing about it all is that the health of these people is, if anything, better than the average," remarked Halbert yesterday. There is little sickness.

In Northeast Washington a colony lives on a wooded hill far from the streets. Its houses are built of crates and scrapwood, which buckle in the strong winds.

In one tenement five adults and a child were found living in a single upstairs room.

Post Staff Photos.

Liquor Dealers Protest Sales In Chain Stores

Move to License All in District Also Fought by Independents.

While the House District Committee appears to be willing to change its mind and remove the restriction in the District liquor act limiting chain store companies to a single license good only in one store, considerable opposition is developing to the proposed amendment.

This amendment and others may be considered by the committee today, although Representative Palmisano, ranking member, who will preside in the absence of Chairman Norton, said he did not know what would be taken up.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride appeared at the meeting last Wednesday with two amendments drafted to conform with suggestions of Attorney General Cummings, but he was not called upon to present them. He will be on hand again today.

The District Retail Beverage Dealers Association, an organization just formed by applicants for licenses, is the latest to protest the removal of the restriction on chain stores.

The association, in a letter signed by Ferdinand M. Ney, chairman, declared that the granting of licenses to all chain store branches now would endanger the investments of present licensees as chain stores would be able to undersell independent stores because their wage scales are lower.

The House Committee also has received letters of protest from prominent independent store owners.

Police Discount Armenian Threats

D. C. Rug Dealer's Life Is Held Safe.

Reported threats against Vahan Arslanian, Washington rug dealer and friend of Archbishop Leon Tourian, murdered Armenian church head, were discredited yesterday by police.

Arslanian declared he received numerous telegrams and telephone calls threatening his life. Police said their investigation did not warrant action. Archbishop Tourian was stabbed to death at the altar of his church in New York on Christmas Day.

Faces Music

Didn't Compose It, So He's Indicted.

Charged with use of the mails to defraud, Earle Whittemore was indicted by the District grand jury with the notation that persons who had dealt with him were "too numerous to mention."

A plan by which he obtained small sums of money from authors of poems or rhymes that he was supposed to set to music was outlined as forming the complaint.

Whittemore, it was charged, advertised that he would furnish the musical accompaniment of such efforts and would place them on programs of various sorts. Loulou D. Fox, Landover, Md., and Mrs. Hattie Clyde McIntire, 514 Seventh street northeast, were listed by the grand jury as being among those who had given money to him.

George P. Van Wyck Buried at Milton, Pa.

George Peter Van Wyck, of Washington, died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., on February 4, after an illness of several months of a complication of ailmenis, it became known yesterday.

He was born in Atlanta nearly 60 years ago, a son of the Rev. George P. and Octave Burleigh Van Wyck. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mima Van Wyck. Interment took place in the family plot at Milford, Pa.

Pianist Novaes Plays Tonight

Schumann Work Chosen at Symphony Orchestra Program Here.

Guiomar Novaes, distinguished Brazilian pianist, who is considered the logical successor of Teresa Carreno, will play the Schumann concerto this evening with the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall. Many Latin-American diplomats, including Dr. Leo Rowe, head of the Pan-American Union, are planning to attend. Mme. de Lima e Silva, wife of the Brazilian ambassador, will occupy a box.

In addition to the melodious and romantic concerto of Schumann, the program will contain the brilliant "Fire Bird" suite by Igor Stravinski, Conductor Hans Kindler's suite of sixteenth century Dutch tunes, and the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's incidental music for "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The Stravinski suite of six movements, arranged from the "Fire Bird" ballet composed in 1910 for Sergei Diaghilev, is remarkable for its virtuosity in instrumental scoring. It was this work which first brought Stravinski to the notice of the general public and established his fame as a master of unusual color effects in orchestration.

Concert-goers attending the National Symphony Orchestra regularly are requested to note particularly that this concert, one of the "symphony series," will take place at 8:30 o'clock tonight, instead of the usual afternoon hour.

Countess' Aid in Swindle Trades Short for Long Term

But Gormley's Action Is Aimed at Getting Earlier Parole.

George A. Gormley, convicted of larceny, yesterday traded a four to eight year penitentiary sentence in District Supreme Court for a straight eight-year sentence. Gormley was convicted with Countess Grace de Benque of stealing $5,000 from Miss Louise Maret.

Under the new sentence Gormley may serve less time than under the old. Under the indeterminate sentence he would have been required to serve four years before being eligible to parole. Under the definite sentence he will be eligible for parole after serving 18 months.

The sentence was changed on the plea of his attorney, Joseph C. Turco, who held that the indeterminate sentence could not apply to a crime committed in 1931, before the indeterminate sentence law was passed.

Gormley and Countess de Benque were alleged to have collected the money from Miss Maret, coproprietor of a girls' school, by falsely leading her to believe she had been arrested.

D.C. Teachers Facing Tests On Alcohol

Examinations Include Physiology Regarding Use of Rum.

Revival of Teaching Ill Effects to Be Made Here.

With repeal just around the corner for the District, school officials are determined to emphasize the teaching of the harmful effects of alcohol, it was revealed yesterday in an announcement of the board of examiners.

The examiners served special notice that all candidates for the examinations, to be held on April 2 and 3 be required to pass satisfactory examination in physiology and hygiene with special reference to the nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics on the human system.

Although a law requiring this examination was enacted in the District more than 50 years ago, it was not stressed during prohibition. The law also requires that all children be taught the effects of alcohol and other narcotics on the human system.

This instruction, according to school officials, has been continued throughout prohibition. Soon after repeal, Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, called school principals for a conference. He later announced that the type of teaching will not be changed.

School Association Irked.

This announcement awakened the ire of the District Public School Association last week when it adopted a resolution calling on the board and the school officials to give stronger attention to the teaching of the ill effects of strong drink.

The ancient law carries a penalty of dismissal to a school official if the instruction is not carried out. At its meeting last week the public school association endeavored to prove that the instruction was not being given as assiduously as it should. A teacher present at the meeting was closely questioned. The instruction, she said, consisted of brief lectures on the subject of alcohol and narcotics, supplemented by textbooks.

The candidates for the forthcoming examination will be given notice to prepare themselves. School teachers are not compelled to refrain from taking an occasional drink or smoking.

No Hangover Teaching.

No exaggerated stories regarding the results of drinking are given pupils, according to school officials. They are not taught that one drink on occasions, after they are grown, will make them reeling drunk or bring little demons and dwarfs in their wake. Instead, they are given a sensible and comprehensive understanding of the effects on the human system from overindulgence.

The examinations on April 2 and 3 will be for licenses to teach in the white public schools, examinations will be given teachers of academic, commercial and scientific subjects in the junior and senior high schools and for the elementary schools.

Jury Indicts 13 On Drug Count

The District grand jury cleaned up its slate of narcotic investigations yesterday by indicting 13 persons, accused of violating the Harrison narcotic act.

The indictments were based on raids last month. Included in the list are five women.

Those indicted were Lorraine Horner, John Bates, Harry Stein Alfred Maggio, James Snow, Joseph Samuel Cohen, Fannie Maggio, Sophie Perrin, Charles Perrin, May Lee, Charles Dixon, Anna Reed and John Histon.

Narcotic inspectors said they made 57 purchases from the defendants and seized small quantities of narcotics.

Pershing Bust Grand Jurors Indict Layton

Six Counts of Fraud Are Contained in Bill of Probers.

Alfred M. Layton, promoter of a Nation-wide campaign to present a bust of Gen. John J. Pershing to the Federal Government, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday.

The grand jury returned six counts accusing Layton of using the mails in the furtherance of a scheme to defraud. Each court recited donation of a sum of money from various National "big names."

Layton was arrested several weeks ago, by Postal inspectors and Detective Serg. Earl P. Hartmann. He is at liberty on a $10,000 bond.

The scheme, police said, was that he asked hundreds of nationally known persons to contribute toward purchase of a bust by Moses Dykaar, sculptor, which had been admired by Gen. Pershing. He was asked to solicit the funds by Maj. Gen. George O. Squire, a close friend of Gen. Pershing, he said.

While Gen. Squire was attending the Chicago Fair in an official capacity, Layton, police say, expanded the original group intended to be solicited, and sent out thousands of letters, securing some $11,000. An account in a local bank shows a balance of approximately $20. Unauthorized use of Gen. Squire's name is alleged.

Dykaar died under the wheels of a New York subway train last March.

Layton, according to papers seized in a K street building where he had an office, had made tentative plans to secure an artist to make a bust of Knute Rockne, famous Notre Dame football coach, and have alumni groups purchase it and present it to the university.

Also, it was shown, there was a plan to present to Postmaster Gen. Walter Brown an oil portrait of himself. Postmasters throughout the country were to have been solicited for funds to make the purchase. The plan was vetoed by postal officials here.

Emergency Relief Division to Move

The District Commissioners yesterday authorized the Emergency Relief Division to rent new quarters at Trinity Parish, at Third and C streets northwest, and to move its central quarters from 464 Indiana avenue northwest.

In the new quarters Commissioner George E. Allen has ordered the establishment of a model agency for handling relief applications. The old quarters were found inadequate.

Capital Cafe Men Hear Code Details

Wilson, Shaw, Maj. Walter Explain Provisions.

Provisions of the restaurant code which goes into effect Monday were explained to Washington restaurant men yesterday.

The speakers were Robert J. Wilson, field representative of the National code authority; Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Retail Trade Council for the District, and Maj. Raymond J. Walter, District compliance officer.

The code provides for a minimum salary of $10.50 a week for service employes and $14.50 for nonservice. The working week is limited to six days of 54 hours for men and 48 hours for women.

$20,000 Suit in Auto Crash.

Frank Bodmer, 3517 Thirteenth street northwest, yesterday in District Supreme Court filed suit against Nell Ingels, 1819 Ontario place northwest, for $20,000 damages. He claimed he had been injured when an automobile of the defendant struck his car at Thirty-third street and Nebraska avenue northwest.

At 80, U. S. Employe Faces Age Limit Just as She "Gets Good."

Mrs. Cornelia McCurley, of 1010 Twenty-third street northwest, who can still classify 10,500 checks a day in the check assorting division of the Treasury while colleagues one-fourth her age consider they have made good when they have handled 6,000, is about to lose her job.

Mrs. McCurley is 80 years old. She is reported to be the oldest employe in the Government service, and her term of office will end February 27 unless the President makes a special dispensation.

In 13 years—she entered the serv- in July, 1921—millions of canceled Government checks have passed through Mrs. McCurley's fingers.

Gray-haired, bright-eyed, Mrs. McCurley is still so brisk and so youthful in appearance that no one would suspect her age.

Mrs. McCurley was 65 when she passed the Civil Service examination for filing clerk in the Veterans' Administration. Though she had passed the usual age limit, she was entitled to take the examination as the widow of a Civil War veteran and World War mother of a soldier. She had already worked satisfactorily in the Allotment Allowance Division during the war, and later in the Labor Bureau.

With the zest of a young girl, Mrs. McCurley tells how she landed in Washington with $3.50 in her pocket. She rented a room for $1.50 a week and with the other $1.50 she lived for six days. When the week was ended, she had a job. And a grand job—$15 a month with room and meals. She has had many other jobs since.

And Mrs. McCurley, who says she needs her present job badly, thinks it is foolish to retire her just when she is getting so god.

Lorton Probe Help Offered Shoemaker

Former Inmate Asserts He Will "Guarantee" Indictments.

Representative Charges Brittin Gets Favors in District Jail.

Representative Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, yesterday received a telegram from Ed Bedell, former Lorton convict, stating that he would be willing to appear as a witness in the District Welfare Board's inquiry into the operation of the District Reformatory.

Bedell, who is wanted by the Welfare Board's penal committee as the key witness, said he would substantiate Shoemaker's allegations and "guarantee indictments if the investigation is on the level."

Charges Brittin Favored.

The Minnesota legislator charged that Col. L. H. Brittin, vice president of the Northwestern Airways, contempt of the Senate, is being who is serving a 1-day sentence for granted special privileges at the jail.

"I have been informed that Brittin does not associate with the other prisoners, that he does not sleep in a cot, but has a bed and special meals and enjoys more freedom than other inmates," he said. "He also has a radio and other concessions not accorded the ordinary prisoner."

Shoemaker said the other prisoners resent the special treatment accorded Col. Brittin.

Rives Issues Denial.

Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the jail, denied the allegation. He said "the prison routine has not been changed in any way" to accommodate Col. Brittin.

Bedell's telegram to Shoemaker follows:

"Delighted information has broken and probe started. Will substantiate your allegations and guarantee indictments if investigation is on the level. Would come, but finances are low and must be sure of unnecessary embarrassments, as previously mentioned. We have instruments capable of cracking that place. Don't stop now. Best regards."

Shoemaker, who admitted that some of his charges were based on information furnished by Bedell, declined to reveal the latter's whereabouts.

The Representative also has refused to appear before the Welfare Board committee, but is pressing his resolution authorizing a Congressional investigation of Lorton and all Federal prisons.

Good morning! We do not imagine that everybody who dances tomorrow evening to celebrate Washington's Birthday, will wear a full dress or tuxedo suit. If you are going to a business suit party, it is a good time to wear a new Spring suit and we are ready to fit you in one.

Senate Passes Walsh Amateur Bill Prohibiting Pro Boxing Here

House Action Is Expected Monday

Senator's Measure Is Identical to That of Rep. Hartley.

Black Proposal Faces Revision to Overcome Objections.

THE Senate yesterday passed the Walsh bill to permit the charging of admission to amateur boxing contests in the District. The measure as passed is exactly similar to a bill introduced in the House by Representative Hartley which already has been reported out by the House District Committee and is expected to come before the House for a vote Monday.

The Hartley-Walsh bills in their present form specifically prohibit professional boxing in Washington in direct contradiction to a bill introduced by Representative Black to legalize professional matches in the District.

The Black professional bill, which also is expected to come before the House Monday, was reported out of committee with permission for an amendment to nullify provisos of the amateur bills which render professional boxing illegal. That amendment is expected to be added Monday.

Proponents of amateur boxing in the District have pointed out that under the provisions of the Black bill, college boxing and matches in the various boys clubs throughout the city would be practically impossible.

Hit Age Limit.

Two of the restrictions in the Black measure to which they object are those setting a minimum age limit of 18 for participants in matches and prohibiting the admission of children under 16 to matches to which admission is charged.

Those interested in amateur boxing point out also that under the provisos of the Black bill, local universities would not be allowed to pay referees or other officials officiating at their contests. Representatives Black and Hartley are expected to confer this week on amendments to overcome the objections to the Black measure in order that it may be speedily acted upon by the House Monday.

Oakland Seeks Pitcher Faber

Asks Aid of Lew Fonseca in Getting Veteran.

OAKLAND, Calif., Feb. 20 (AP).—Hopeful that Urban (Red) Faber, Chicago White Sox pitcher, may be induced not to quit baseball as he has announced, the Oakland club today was seeking the services of the veteran spitball artist.

Officials of the Coast League team said they had asked Lew Fonseca, White Sox manager, to intercede for them. Two other veteran major league spitballers are joining Coast teams this season. Jack Quinn is coming to Hollywood and Clarence Mitchell to the San Francisco Missions.

Hickory Lad Wins At Fair Grounds

Club Announces No More Racing on Mondays.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 20 (AP).—Little Jackie Westrope, leading jockey of 1933, had little trouble in bringing home a winner, William C. Reichert's Hickory Lad, in the mile feature of the Audubon Purse here today. Mrs. F. West's Cursor, which won his last two starts, was second, beaten two lengths. The Southland Stable's Play Hooky lost the place by several lengths. The winner paid $5 straight, $2.80 to place and $2.60 to show for a $2 mutuel ticket and covered the distance in 1:41 1-5.

The gelded son of Ladkin broke slowly, but was up with the leaders, Black Peter and Cursor, at the halfway mark. Cursor made a game effort to hold a short lead entering the stretch, but Hickory Lad overtook him and won going away.

Contract Blues Again Trouble Chick Hafey

Berkeley, Calif., Feb. 20 (AP).—Chick Hafey, Cincinnati Reds outfielder, is being troubled with a slight case of the "contract blues" again this spring. Because the salary cut was greater than he expected, he hasn't signed his 1934 contract.

Instead of holding out for a month after the season opens, as he did two years ago, he is going back early to talk to his bosses, he said today.

"I think it will be straightened out easily," he said, "but I'm going back to talk it over."

Martinsburg Defeats Handley High, 30 to 14

Winchester, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Handley High School basketers lost their second Cumberland Valley Athletic League game with Martinsburg (W. Va.) High School here, 30-14.

The Handley Junior Varsity, playing a similar quintet from Martinsburg, also took the short end of a 29-to-8 score.

Irrepressible Jerome (Dizzy) Dean of the St. Louis Cards, the majors' most blatant pitcher, reprimands the class dunce at the baseball school for boys at Hot Springs, Ark., where Dean is a member of the faculty. "Never sass the umpire," says Dizzy to John Wegner, of Berwyn, Ill., who seems to be taking his punishment lightly.

Navy Courtmen And Mermen Busy Today

Meet Pennsylvania and Rutgers, Respectively, in Three Events.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Meeting University of Pennsylvania on the basket ball court, and Rutgers University in swimming and water polo, Naval Academy varsity athletes tomorrow will present three outstanding attractions.

The rivalry between Penn and Navy on the court is eclipsed only by that between Army and Navy, while Rutgers long has been a leading rival in the tank, and, led by Walter Spence, crank dash man, the New Brunswick lads are expected to give the Tars a tight rub.

Johnny Wilson, Navy's veteran basket ball mentor, may or may not start his full strength against the Quakers, with the Army game only three days in the offing.

Navy Craves Victory.

The Tars are extremely anxious to add the Quakers to their string of victors. The Red and Blue tossers are leading the intercollegiate league, which presages the stiffest kind of battle, and this furnishes an additional incentive for a Navy victory.

Whatever course Wilson may elect to pursue, the Tars regulars are certain to see action in a major portion of the game, which means that Dornin and Rankin will be the forwards; Borries, center; and Mandelkorn and Badger, guards.

The Middies have been in an unusual status this year, in that their captain, Si Randolph, a guard, was unable to make the grade. Randolph, however, has seen frequent service as a sub.

Hagerstown Moose Five Vs. Stewards Tonight

The Hagerstown "Big Moose" basket ball team comes here tonight to play Stewarts Pharmacy at Hine Junior High School at 8 o'clock. The Moose are consdered the fastest and largest quintet in this section. Stewarts have garnered a couple of stars who should strengthen them considerably.

Tomorrow night indoor base ball (soft ball) will be inaugerated by the Southeast Community Center at Hine, the Easton A. C., playing Congress Heights at 9 o'clock. It is proposed to form an indoor league at Hine and teams interested are requested to get in touch with Jack Haas, athletic director, at once. The Brooks A. C., girls sextet will play the Red Flashes at 8 o'clock.

West Virginia Names Writer as Net Coach

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—West Virginia University athletic authorities have announced the appointment of Dave Jacobs, sports writer for the Morgantown Post, as tennis coach.

Jacobs, long a tennis enthusiast helped to reorganize the sport at the university on an intercollegiate basis in 1932 after it had been abandoned there for several years.

James Butler, Turf Leader, Is Dead

Widely-Known Merchant Horseman Controlled Laurel Track.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20 (AP).—James Butler, 79, founder of the grocery chain bearing his died tonight.

Mr. Butler's rise to a leading place on the American turf was a gradual transition from ownership of a horse and carriage, which as a young man he maintained for pleasure driving. He began his racing activities with a string of trotters in the late '80's, these later being replaced by a stable of thoroughbred runners. In 1913 he purchased the entire lot of Castleton bred yearlings, 14 colts and 22 fillies from the stable of the late James R. Keene. These with other additions from time to time eventually made the Butler stable one of the most formidable on American race tracks.

Controlled Laurel.

As further evidence of his interest in the development of the thoroughbred and the sport generally, Mr. Butler extended his holdings in the racing game in 1900 by purchasing the Empire City track at Yonkers, N. Y., and in 1912 getting control of the Laurel track in Maryland. He also was interested in the Juarez track in Mexico.

The fortune which Mr. Butler accumulated in the grocery business was enhanced through his real estate operations in locating his stores. It was his policy, when possible, to purchase the property of which his stores were part and in some cases to buy corner lots in sparsely settled sections, upon which stores were erected.

Prominent Churchman.

For many years Mr. Butler had been prominent in lay activities of the Catholic Church and had made many large donations to church charities. At a cost of $250,000 he built at Tarrytown the Marymount Academy of the Sacred Heart as a monument to his wife. In 1926 he purchased the Fifth avenue residence of Mrs. Florence Vanderbilt Burden in New York and presented it to the same order as a town school.

In recognition of his many gifts to charity, Mr. Butler, in 1912, was created a knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great by the late Pope Pius X.

Conception Five Wins.

Immaculate Conception School varsity defeated the junior varsity 24-14 yesterday. Newland, with 6 points, featured for the winners. The varsity will meet Sacred Heart tomorrow in the second game of the eigth grade Catholic championship.

Garden Plans Ring Title Tourney

Boxing men say it will be a long time before the division again can boast of a performer like the Cuban flash, one of the greatest little ebony fighting men in ring history, but right now there probably are more top-notch feather aspirants than in any other class.

Tourney Suggested.

When the New York State Commission vacated Chocoalte's crown yesterday because of his failure to defend the title within 30 days after Frankie Klick, of California, had filed his challenge, it suggested that Madison Square Garden stage an elimination tourney to find a successor.

Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of the Garden Corporation, thought the commission's suggestion a good one and said that the Garden would start arranging the tourney after the Carnera-Loughran championship fight at Miami, February 28, is out of the way.

Miller Finalist.

Kilpatrick's idea is to have a winner emerge from the tourney who will be recognized as champion not only in New York State—as was Chocolate—but by all boxing organizations in the world. Accordingly, Freddie Miller, of Cincinnati, the N. B. A. champion, would be one of the two finalists.

Some of the outstanding feathers who may take part in the tourney are Klick, who knocked out Chocolate at Philadelphia on December 25; Mike Belloise, Lew Feldman, Petey Hayes and Al Roth, of New York; Vittorio Tamagnini, of Italy, claimant of the European title; Seaman Watson, of England; Baby Arimendi, of Mexico; Jose Cirones, of Spain; Maurice Leperson, of France; Tommy Paul, of Buffalo; Eddie Shea, of Chicago; Petey Sarron, of Birmingham; Bucky Burton, of Miami; Varias Milling, of the Philippines, and Frankie Wallace, of Cleveland.

To Continue in Ring.

Chocolate beat the New York Commission to the punch by two days. He resigned as feather champion in Havana on Saturday, explaining that he no longer could make 126 pounds. He expects to continue in the ring as a lightweight. He is only 26 years old.

He was crowned featherweight champion by the New York Commission on October 13, 1932, when he scored a technical knockout over Lew Feldman in the final of an elimination to determine a successor to Bat Battalino when the latter grew out of the division.

Lindsay, Blake to Get Try-Outs With Reds

Cincinnati, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Announcement that the releases of Pitchers Jim Lindsay and Sheriff Fred Blake had been obtained from Columbus of the American Association under a "conditional sale" agreement was made by the Cincinnati National League Club today.

Both will be tried out at Tampa by Bob O'Farrell this spring. The Cincinnati Club has until May 15 to decide if they are to be kept or returned. They are veteran right-handers who have seen considerable National League service.

New Orleans, Feb. 20 (AP).—Racing on Mondays at the Fair Grounds will be abandoned for the remainder of the meet ending March 18. Eight races, instead of the usual seven will be run daily, including Sundays.

Officials said abandonment of Monday racing was due to light patronage on that day.

JAMES BUTLER.

Facing Slash, Foxx Hints He'd Quit

30 Per Cent Cut Doesn't Make Macks' Star Feel So Good.

Offered $10,000 Job at Camp; Says He Could Earn With Farm.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20 (AP).—Jimmie Foxx, the remainder of Connie Mack's one-time powerful Philadelphia Athletics, feels rather badly at the moment over the chances of a young man getting ahead in the baseball world.

He's a holdout, for what he considers more than good and sufficient reasons, but the brawny young first baseman isn't the type to shout that he'll quit baseball unless his demands are met. He'd rather just let the world draw its own conclusions as to whether Philadelphia is trying to do right by the greatest slugger in the game today.

Only $11,000 a Year.

"I won't tell you—I can't—what I've been offered for the 1934 season," he said bitterly. "But I can say it's a 30 per cent cut from the three-year contract I just completed. Under that arrangement I got $50,000 for three years, which amounted to $16,666 a year. So get out your pencil and work it out for yourself."

It works out to $11,000 a year, and the proferred contract is one year only.

"It would be funny to me, if it wasn't my livelihood," Jimmie explained. "Babe Ruth gets $35,000 this year and he hopes to play in 100 games for that. Last season the Babe just did hit .300. Lou Gehrig gets $25,500 this season, I've been told, and he hit .335 or thereabouts. Chuck Klein, plenty of a hitter, is going to draw down $22,500 from the Cubs. And I'm to get $11,000 after hitting .357. Of course, I only hit 48 home runs last season, so what can I expect."

Going Slowly, Carefully.

Jimmie is going slowly and carefully about the business of making a better financial arrangements with the Athletics.

"There's one point, though, that I must consider carefully," he said. "I'm 26 years old right now. I'm in my prime. I should be able to command as much money now as I ever will command during my playing days, ten years more at the most.

"Now it stands to reason that if I'm only worth such a small sum to the Athletics this year, then I should get smart and examine carefully the chances I have to make money, perhaps more money, at something else than baseball. I don't want to quit baseball. I want to play.

"But I have had one offer of $10,000 to take charge of a boys' camp up North for a year. I've got a 200-acre farm down in Suttlersville, Md., where by tending to business I can make as much a year as the Athletics are offering me. Furthermore, that will last all my life. So isn't it natural that I should be thinking things over very carefully. My financial future in this game doesn't seem to be exactly bright."

And what definite measures is he taking about it all?

"I'm going over to Fort Myers to report to Connie Mack March 1," he said. "I'm going to talk to him, and listen to him. I hope things will turn out all right."

Firm Uses Honey In Its Golf Balls

Minneapolis, Feb. 20 (AP).—From now on a lot of "dubs" at golf will be able to say "that shot was a honey" and be telling the truth.

For, said T. W. Burleson, of Waxahachie, Tex., one firm is using honey to make golf balls, and he predicted others would follow suit.

Burleson, who is attending the convention of the American Honey Producers League and the American Honey Institute, now in session, said ancient Egyptians used honey in the manufacture of embalming fluid—but golf balls made out of honey are more in keeping with the times."

"Of course," he added, "the golf balls won't be made entirely out of honey," Burleson explained, "but considerable honey will be used as an ingredient in their manufacture."

Kizer Reported Next Pilot at Ohio State

Salary Said to Be One of Chief Obstacles; Wants $9,000.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Reports that Noble Kiser, football coach at Purdue University, will be head football coach at Ohio State, were received from reliable sources today.

Usually well-informed sources said official announcement of a new coach would be made within a few days. Sam Willaman, coach at Ohio for five years, resigned a month ago and accepted a similar position at Western Reserve.

It was understood that L. W. St. John, athletic director, and J. L. Morfill, vice president of the university, would go to Lafayette, Ind., tomorrow to confer with Kizer. Kizer and St. John recently talked over the situation, but no announcement followed their conference.

One of the chief barriers to Kizer's acceptance was understood to be the matter of salary. Kizer was represented as willing to accept for $9,000 annually, considerably more than Willaman received.

League May Add Two New Teams

Cumberland Man Named as 1934 Treasurer.

Midland, Md., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—At a meeting of the Cumberland and Georges Creek Baseball League, John J. Robinson, of the Liberty Trust Co., of Cumberland, was elected treasurer of the circuit for the 1934 season. Other officers are R. J. "Dick" Stakem, of Midland, president, and Ray Wilt, of Westernport, treasurer.

Secretary Wilt announced that the six teams represented in the league last season have retained their franchises and that possibly eight teams would be ready to toe the mark when the season gets under way.

The four new teams that made applications for franchises were Barton and Pompey, of the Allegany County League, Ellerslie, of the Potomac Valley League, and Frostburg, of the Interstate League. Whether the circuit will continue with six clubs or operate with eight this year will be decided at a meeting of team representatives to be held either in Midland or Mount Savage Sunday, March 4.

Feathers Is Signed By Cincinnati Reds

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 20 (AP).—Beattie Feathers, All-American half back on the University of Tennessee's football team last season, today became a member of the Cincinnati Baseball Club

He said he had reached terms with officials of the club and on February 26 would join the Reds' spring training camp at Tampa, Fla.

Veteran Jess Haines Names Own Salary, Signed by Cards

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 20 (AP).—Forty-year-old Jess Haines, "feeling better than in years," today named his own salary for 1934 and immediately signed a contract with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Haines, veteran of many baseball wars, last year had an earned-run average of 2.50 per nine innings, the best of his career. He won 9 out of 15 games, and this year is counted upon to be a real mound ace.

Arriving from his home in Ohio, the right-handed fast-ball pitcher, at the request of Vice President Branch Rickey, named his own salary. Then he received permission to carry out his own plans for getting into condition.

When a visit to Hot Springs, Ark., was mentioned Haines demurred. Explaining he was carrying "just the weight" he liked, the veteran said he desired to go at once to the Cards' spring training camp at Bradenton, Fla. Rickey agreed.

Haines injured his arm in 1931 and was unable to work in the world series. The flipper bothered again in 1932, but last season seemed fully recovered.

So tonight the oldest Cardinal hurler in the point of service was en route back home to Phillipsburg, Ohio. There he expected to be joined by his family and motor at once to Bradenton.

W. & L. Boxers Primed for Tourney

Two of Eight Men Entered Have Not Been Beaten This Season.

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Washington and Lee will enter a full team of eight men, two of whom have not been defeated this season, in the Southern Conference boxing tournament at Charlottesville this week-end.

The undefeated Generals are George Short, middleweight, and Lew Martin, light-heavy. A third serious contender for conference honors from the Washington and Lee ranks will be Capt. Ed Mincher, welterweight, who has lost only to his old rival, Garner, of North Carolina State.

Short has a clean record of victories over conference opponents from North Carolina State, Virginia Tech and Maryland, but Patrone, of Roanoke College, held him to a draw in the opening meet of the season. Martin's record in conference competition is a draw with North Carolina State's Fletcher, and a technical knockout over McCaw, of Maryland. Virginia Tech forfeited to him. He also gained a decision over Capt. Doyle, of Roanoke.

Mincher knocked out Capt. Bussey, of Virginia Tech, and won on a decision from Roanoke and a forfeit at Maryland. The Mincher-Garner rivalry goes back to the 1932 season when Mincher was awarded a technical knockout over the State boxer, when the latter was unable to come out for an extra round. Garner outpointed Mincher last year and again this season, and the Washington and Lee captain hopes for a chance to even things up this week-end. Although both Mincher and Garner have competed in two past conference tournaments, they never have met in a tournament bout.

Five Sophomores.

In addition to Mincher, Martin and Short, the only veterans on the Washington and Lee team, Coach Tex Tilson will enter five sophomore fighters, three of whom have been defeated only once. Duncan Corbett, bantamweight, and Wally Davies, featherweight, lost to their Carolina State opponents, while Lyle Moore, lightweight, suffered his only defeat at Maryland last Saturday. Ed Jean will represent Washington and Lee in the junior middleweight class and Mower is the Generals' almost underweight heavyweight.

Washington and Lee has defeated Roanoke College, Virginia Tech and Maryland this season, and lost to North Carolina State.

Buckholtz sank eight field goals and a foul to run up 17 points. Not far in the wake of the eagle-eye Lincoln Park star in the matter of scoring was John McCarthy, who tallied 13 points.

The score at half time showed Eastern in the lead, 23-10.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Two seeded favorites, Mrs. Henry C. Brunie, of New York, No. 1, and Helen L. Grawn, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., No. 5, went down to unexpected defeats today as the play in the twenty-seventh annual women's indoor national tennis championships reached the quarter-final round.

Mrs. Brunie, the top-ranking star who is third in the Eastern and twelfth in the National rankings, fell before the youthful aggressiveness of 17-year-old Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., a comparative new comer to tournament tennis. Miss Pedersen came from behind to win out after three tensely-fought sets, 2—6, 10—8, 7—5.

Miss Grawn, was beaten by Mary K. Smith, of New York, in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4. Miss Smith, daughter of King Smith, chairman of the tournament committee of the U. S. L. T. A., played a hard, steady game.

Cumberland Caseys Down Baltimoreans

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—The Cumberland Caseys gained a 35-to-26 triumph over the Polish-American Basketball Club of Baltimore in a rough-and-tumble contest at the State Armory.

At the close of the first half Edward Posko, manager of the Baltimore team, asked Manager Gunther of the Caseys to get another referee to handle the latter part of the game, for fear that some of his players would be injured but the local leader turned a deaf ear to the proposition.

Rawinisz, Baltimore guard, was banished on personals early in the fourth period and Grabowski, another guard, was banished by Law before the game ended after giving the arbiter a piece of his mind.

The latter uickly dropped back to third place s Flying Sailor sprinted into a lear advantage over Quel Jeu. It as a two-horse affair after the first uarter mile.

Under a particularly strong finish y Jockey Joe Renick, Chu Chu ot up to nose out the King in the nitial event. Gibby's Choice was heavily played third, a length ack. Chu Chu, out-run Early and n close quarters, began a powerful rive on the inside at the turn for ome and made the grade right t the end. The King and Gibby's hoice, well up all the way, held n well but neither could stave off he closing rush of Chu Chu, which eturned $12.30.

Hasty Glance Wins.

Hasty Glance, speedy daughter of Haste owned by Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, made it two in a row nder Johnny Gilbert in the ju- enile dash. Well played at $5.60 or two, Hasty Glance scored by -lengths over the fast closing Can- erboy. Query lost the place by a ead. The latter broke on top, but could not match Hasty Glance's peed and swerved often during the running.

Hastipast won the third race, to give her sire, Haste, two straight winners. Hastipast was held at slightly better than 1 to 2, but it took her utmost to save the purse by a head from All Rowes. Upper- cut was beaten another head for place honors.

Salut d'Amour Wins.

Salut d'Amour, beaten off in his last two starts, suddenly lost that tired feeling and upset calculations in the fourth race, a mile dash. The gelding drove home by two lengths, to pay $52.60 for a $2 ticket. The reinstated Jimmy Hunter held Making Bubbles together long enough to save the place by a head from Royal Durbar.

Just Fun displayed rare game- ness to stick it out and win the sixth, decided over the mile and a furlong route. Southard ran the winner to a head and was an easy second over Gracias. Just Fun easily outran his company to steal far clear, but in the last quarter mile Southard gained fast and seemed to have the pacemaker beaten entering the last furlong. Just Fun was too game to lose, however. Clamay was in early trouble and can do better. The winner paid $13.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

It was an old Russian custom among members of the royal household staff to keep on charging the expense list with things that were no longer bought. Perhaps the most notorious example of this was tallow bought to rub on the Empress Catherine's nose when she suffered from a cold.

Ten rubles were charged against the household by some servant on the day the tallow was first bought in 1790 on order of the court physician. Next day another 10-ruble ($5.51) entry was made. It continued day after day, year after year, even after the empress had long forgotten the cold—even after she was dead.

Czar Nicholas discovered the fraud one day in 1850, after the daily entry had been made for 60 years—a net charge of more than $112,000 for tallow to cure a cold.

One of the strangest battles in history was the battle of the wooden kegs during the Revolutionary War. The battle lasted 24 hours, all the shooting was done by one army, nobody was killed, nobody wounded, and nobody captured.

It started when the Americans floated several kegs of gunpowder down the Delaware River in the hope that they might strike against British ships and explode. By accident one exploded against a cake of ice, exposing the plan to the British. The army immediately started firing on the kegs to explode them, taking potshots at everything floating in the water.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 20.

Looked as though my XXX special, Brass onkey, read the reports of the blizzard that hit New York this morning and decided it was too cold to do his best running. We took a beating from that angle. Otherwise, we were fairly well protected, having three winners for the day, including a substantial $12.30 payoff on Chu Chu in the opener and an encouraging $13 return on Just Fun. Hastipast won and that was about all, supplying only a 55-cent dividend.

Saw an old friend of yours today, Bad Check Chief, and he's holding the fort. Mike and I pulled out the speed books tonight and figured right down to the fractions. Now I lay me down to sleep.

BILL.

First race — Pass, that's what I would like to do on the maiden juvenile romps, but as the boss insists I must make a stab. Pass has a fair chance of getting home ahead. Shuffle Off and Justa Play for the rest.

Second race—Below Zero won for me once but was disqualified. Clear sailing tomorrow should find this one leading the brigade at the wire. Hope Eternal and Aperitif for the other awards.

Third race—Gen. Lejune appears to have found another race to his liking. Now that his real form is known we should see some real running from this fellow. God O'War for the place ahead of the cheap Lauretta Nash.

Fourth race — Pardee has found different ways to lose races. Perhaps a better ride will be forthcoming tomorrow. That is all needed. Moane Keala has recent good races as recommendations. Off Duty, with only 105 pounds, may be the surprise of the test.

Fifth race — Drombo in present form is the solid horse in this field. Gets an apprentice allowance and that recent sizzler should find this one ready for a mile of this sort. Ridgeview, with 102 (some rhyme) and Phantom Legion appear to be the most seroius contenders.

Seventh race—Little Corporal went a route last week and turned in a fair job. Gets the edge over Cabochon and Patricia Runyon.

Eighth race — Ukraine has been passed along to me as the sleeper in the finale. Spud and Macasite to take care of the others.

Gilbert Heads Hialeah List With 19 Winners for Meet

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 20 (AP).—While all the talk and excite- ment about the local jockey colony has been restricted almost exclusively to the sensational ap- prentice, Earl Porter, and the pop- ular Silvio Coucci, a quiet, efficient young man from Kansas named Johnny Gilbert, champion Amer- ican rider for 1932, has stolen up and overtaken both of the afore- mentioned boys. When the solemn Syrian won a race here today it marked his nineteenth success of the meeting—and he was on top of the heap. Porter and Coucci are tied for second position with 17 apiece.

With Gilbert in full stride, he has a chance to widen his advantage with Coucci and Porter both tem- porarily out of action. Coucci, who a few days ago bruised his calf and heel with new, tight-fitting boots and jodhpurs, yesterday returned to the shelf. Riding aggravated the condition of his heel. Porter this morning reported sick and can- celed his mounts for the afternoon.

Apprentice Jimmy Hunter's sus- pension was terminated today. The Canadian lad was suspended 20 days after being disqualified on Fleet Flag, but the stewards recon- sidered and this morning cut his suspension in half, so that Jimmy was back in the saddle today, tak- ing Porter's canceled mounts.

HASTIPAST was rushed into a long lead early, showed good speed, but tired badly and just lasted to win. ALL ROWES was best, but was allowed to drop far out of it. She closed gamely and was wearing the winner down. UPPERCUT, well up all the way, ran good game race. GRANNY'S TRADE broke very slow and, in a tangle, closed a big gap. TETRA DOMINO had a flash of early speed.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800: claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:49. Off at 3:49½. Winner, J. SALUT D'AMOUR, showing improvement over recent races, moved up with a rush in stretch and won going away. MAKING BUBBLES rushed into lead, showed good speed and held on well. ROYAL DURBAR finished with a rush and would have been second in another stride. DON'T BLUSH tired badly in final sixteenth. MORALIST ran a very poor race.

Stocks Crawl Upward Under Lighter Sales

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—The weather got in some effective regulation of stock-market volume today.

With attendance on the exchange floor and in brokers' offices sharply cut by a blizzard which necessitated a one-hour delay in opening the market, dealings were greatly reduced. However, the tone was firm and prices showed slight improvement on balance. Transfers totaled 1,228,520 shares.

Speculative interest still centered in favored groups of the moment, mostly those in the lower-price brackets. Motors of that classification, including Studebaker and Packard, were again higher, while office equipment issues such as National Cash Register and Remington-Rand attracted a following.

Aircraft Stocks Rally.

Aircrafts rallied. Paramount, Shulte Stores, Electric Auto-Lite, Kelvinator, Commercial Credit and Belding Hemingway did rather well considering the general dullness, their gains ranging from fractions to more than a point. Coal shares were helped by the recurring cold snap.

Old line favorites were once more neglected from standpoint of volume, though several of these leaders finished with fair gains. Steels looked firm, particularly in the preferred stock division. Chrysler rallied a point but General Motors was less ambitious. Allied Chemical improved about 2. For rails the tone was firm. The Gulf Mobile and Northern shares picked up and Western Maryland added slightly to Monday's rise.

Recovery in the aviation sector brought gains of fractions to 3 points to those issues which recently had been pressed for sale. United traded briskly, up 2⅛ net, and Wright Aero rose 3. Reports that companies might be allowed to bid on new air-mail contracts appeared to have stimulated buying which doubtless included short covering.

In Outside Markets.

Outside the stock exchange, market movements included a drop in silver and its futures, obviously a further reflection of disappointment over the absence of "favorable news" for that metal at Washington. Bar silver sagged ¾ cent, to 46 cents an ounce.

An abrupt reaction in the pound sterling caused some to assume that the British equalization fund was at work in the gold market.

Preliminary railroad earnings figures for 1933 offer evidence of the improvement enjoyed by most transportation companies last year; Pennsylvania, for instance, swelled its per share to $1.46 from $1.03. January returns are still scarce, but the month probably witnessed a considerable rise over 1933. Traffic currently is showing expansion and another rise is indicated for last week.

American Metal Market finds that the outstanding feature in steel is the sharpness of the rise in an apparently quiet market, asserting: "When demand increases so quietly over such a wide front there is furnished an augury that further and marked improvement will occur if trade generally becomes really active. * * * An operating rate of 50 per cent is easily foreseen for the early part of March, whereas 30 days ago it appeared a hopeful view that such a rate would be reached by the end of March."

London—Trading was fairly active on the stock exchange today. Gold mining shares recovered, while industrials strengthened, especially aircraft and rayon shares. Foreign issues eased, silver mining shares received attention, and fixed-dd securities were maintained. The market closed irregular.

Paris—In absence of any encouragement from other markets the bourse was almost devoid of activity and prices were heavy. Rentes/Dr all issues were lower, with the exception of gold mining shares, which were favored by the decline in the pound sterling. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Realisations caused an irregular opening on the boerse. Prices continued to sag slightly and the market closed dull and idle.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Results of Impartial Survey Show Conclusively Majority of Economists Were Opposed to Administration's Monetary Policy.

By Ralph West Robey.

By Ralph West Robey.

It is regrettable that the comprehensive survey of our economists' opinion on monetary problems that just has been made public was not available earlier. Then it would have been impossible for those urging currency panaceas to argue that the experiment was justified because there is no agreement among economists on monetary principles. Of course this does not mean that we would not have been subjected to monetary experimentation. It does mean, nevertheless, that it would have been clear that the course we were following was opposed by an overwhelming proportion of the economists of the country.

This survey was made by the Independent Journal of Columbia University on behalf of the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy. Questionnaires were sent to 2,560 members of the American Economic Association. Replies were received from 845 of the members, an unusually large percentage. These replies then were given to Prof. Wilford I. King, secretary of the American Statistical Association, for tabluation and analysis. From the point of view of assuring that there could not be a charge of bias, a better selection could not have been made for this work. Prof. King not only has a long and excellent record as a statistician, but as well he is sympathetic with the monetary phases of the New Deal. He is not a member of the Economists' National Committee.

Dollar Devaluation Came After Replies Were Made.

Since the questionnaire was sent out, and in fact after most of the replies were in, the President devalued the dollar. As a result some of the questions and answers are of limited value. In many of the others, however, the question at issue is still open and consequently the answers should be of interest for showing what those who devoted a lifetime of study to such problems think should be done.

Outstanding in this particular are the answers to the question: "Do you favor further administrative efforts to raise prices by monetary devices?" Out of a total of 810 replies to this query 73 per cent were in the negative. Among the members of the committee there was 97 per cent opposition. Among those now teaching economics in college 73 per cent were against such further experimentation.

A second question that remains as pertinent as ever was: "Do you believe that the United States should return to the gold standard—ultimately?" Out of 606 replies to this 85 per cent were in the affirmative. Among members of the committee the percentage was 100. In the case of those teaching economics in college 86 per cent voted in favor of a return to the gold standard.

The question on the commodity dollar was worded as follows: "Assuming that success is realized in effecting a return to a gold standard, would you then advocate a policy of altering the gold content of the dollar for the purpose of stabilizing the general price level?" There were 766 answers to this. Of this number 63 per cent were in the negative. Among members of the committee 89 per cent voted in the negative, and among college teachers of economics 64 per cent opposed the commodity dollar idea.

Silver Questions Show Especially Large Percentages.

Last of the questions that may be considered, although they far from complete the list, are those relating to silver. The first of these was whether the Government should make additional purchases of silver. Of the 757 replies received on this 85 per cent were in the negative. Among the members of the committee the percentage was 95, and among those teaching college economics 88.

On whether we should use more silver and less gold in our Federal Reserve bank reserves there were 724 replies. Of these 88 per cent were in the negative. The committee members voted 94 per cent against such a change, and those now teaching economics in college, 89 per cent.

On bimetallism there were 735 answers. Of these 96 per cent were against such a step. Among members of the committee the percentage was 99 and with the college teachers of economics it was 96 per cent.

These questions and answers, it seems to me, provide conclusive evidence as to where the economic profession of the United States stands on the question of monetary manipulation and currency tinkering. They show beyond any reasonable question, as the committee reports, that "the Administration's monetary policy is advocated and supported by only a narrow minority of the economists, in all major phases and in almost every minor phase."

Bond Prices Still Stand At 85.0 Level

Activity Is Reduced as Sales Volume Drops to 13,215,000.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Only a few issues received any appreciable attention in today's quiet bond market, and, at the close, minor price changes predominated.

The activity was restricted, not only because of a more cautious trading activity, but on account of the weather, which delayed the opening of the exchange one hour.

Transfers for the four-hour session totaled only $13,215,000, par value, against yesterday's aggregate of $17,220,000. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged at 85.

Road's Issues Demanded.

The apparent success of the New York Central's plans for some $60,000,000 of May 1 refinancing brought an expanded demand for two of the road's listed issues.

Around 365 of the maturing debenture 4s changed hands at an advance of 2⅛ points. The convertible 6s of 1935 also showed a gain of 4 points. Other of the company's longer term loans, however, were a little easier. Elsewhere, the carrier division was virtually featureless.

Bonds of Consolidated Gas improved, notwithstanding the corporation's statement showing declining earnings last year. American Telephone issues were also relatively firm. New York Dock 4s gained 2⅞ points and Dold Packing 6s advanced 2.

Firm Tone Noted.

A firm tone was exhibited by loans of Philadelphia-Reading Coal & Iron, Chile Copper, Otis Steel, Pennsy-Dixie Cement and Standard Oils of New York and New Jersey.

United States Government securities were moderately higher, but dull. Foreign obligations were uneasy.

Some bonds of Argentina, Dutch East Indies, Batavia, Bolivia, Germany and Great Britain lost 1 to 2 or more.

Acceptances Gain $7,215,850 Volume

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—A gain of $7,215,850 in the volume of bankers acceptances for January was reported today by the American Acceptance Council. The total outstanding as of January 31 was $771,326,418.

"Since August, 1933," said the council, "new credits have more than replaced the amount of maturing bills. During January export credit acceptances increased $18,100,135, continuing recent gains and bringing the total of new export acceptance financing to $65,000,000 above August 31 figures."

Acceptances for financing imports were down $4,974,475 to a total of $89,294,031, continuing the decline noted during recent months.

San Francisco, Feb. 20 (AP).—The American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. reported a consolidated operating profit for 1933 of $1,037,925 here today, as compared with a deficit of $422,162 in 1932.

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—Net income of $7,408,655 for the past year was reported today in the annual statement of Commonwealth Edison Co. and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Commonwealth Subsidiary Corporation.

This was equal to $4.56 per share on the 1,623,464 shares outstanding, as compared with a net of $10,059,487, or $6.24, on the shares outstanding in 1932.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Humble Oil & Refining Co. today declared a 25-cent dividend of the new no par capital stock created by a three for one splitup. This placed the shares on a $1 annual basis, equivalent to $3 on the old stock, which paid $2 yearly. The dividend is payable April 1 to holdings of record March 2.

Earnings of the American Express Co. in 1933 were equivalent to $7.25 a common share, compared with $6.04 a share in 1932.

In a tabulation of earnings compiled by the Associated Press on February 17 these figures, through a mechanical error, were incorrectly credited to the Adams Express Co., an investment trust.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 20 (AP).—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the company's $20 par value common stock, payable March 15 to stockholders of record February 28.

The company also declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on debenture stock, payable April 25 to stockholders of record April 10.

December gross operating revenues of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., as reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission, amounted to $7,426,636, contrasted with $6,771,623 in December, 1932. This revenue is derived from the company's long line business and is exclusive of dividends and interest from subsidiaries.

Net operating income for December was $1,884,931, against $849,814 in the 1932 period. For the 12 months ended December 31 gross revenue was $86,695,109, against $88,158,782. Twelve months net operating income amounted to $13,653,460, compared with $7,900,492 in 1932.

Maple Logs Sent To Europe's Mart

Winchester, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Huge silver leaf maple logs, intended for export to European furniture makers for use in making expensive furniture, are being loaded on freight cars in Winchester.

The logs were obtained in the western section of Frederick County, about 12 miles west of here. It was stated today that the firm in charge of cutting the timber has a contract for several carloads of the logs for European interests. The logs art to be shipped to New York and thence abroad.

Practically all the maple will be used for the high-class veneering of furniture, it was learned, which is finding much favor among the elite of England and continental Europe.

Cotton Prices Decline Under Liquidation

March Closes at 11.90 as General Market Drops 13 to 15 Points.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—The cotton market sold off 65 to 75 cents in the late trading today. May contracts, which had sold up from 12.12 to 12.20 on an early rally, or within 2 points of yesterday's finals, declined to 12.09 under liquidation and Southern selling, closing at that figure. The general market closed easy at net losses of 13 to 15 points.

Opening prices were 8 to 12 points lower in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and March liquidation. But early offerings were fairly well absorbed by the trade, and prices steadied during the middle of the day, and turned easier during the late afternoon.

October contracts, which had advanced from the early low of 12.42 to 12.53, broke to 12.40 under further liquidation and somewhat increased offerings from houses with Southern connections. Closing quotations were at the lowest for the session.

Exports today, 53,459, making 5,429,695 so far this season. Port receipts, 17,380. U. S. port stocks, 3,532,655.

Liverpool cables were lower than due on the New York close of yesterday but a steady tone was reported in that market, with selling on stop orders absorbed by scale-down trade buying, although speculative support was said to be withdrawn pending more definite developments with reference to ginning control.

Houses with both European and Far Eastern connections were credited with selling here during the early trading, but offerings from this source tapered off after the close of Liverpool, which remained opened half an hour later than usual, in order to afford arbitrage opportunities.

Traders evidently found little inspiration in the general news, and the March liquidation in preparation for possible notices next Friday was considered one of the chief trading features.

Bleachable cottonseed oil today was steady early, but eased later under liquidation and commission house selling, promoted by the heaviness of other commodities, with final prices 5 to 8 points net lower. Iron and Steel Industry of Poland Gains

In contrast with other of Poland's industrial branches, the iron and steel industry registered substantial improvement in 1933, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Acting Commercial Attache Basil D. Dahl, Warsaw.

Production expanded to a marked degree, the output of pig iron reaching 305,625 metric tons, a gain of 106,951 tons over the 1932 figure. Crude steel output totaled 817,077 tons, an increase of 266,323 tons over 1932, while that of rolled products amounted to 564,432 tons, or 177,079 above the preceding year.

Export orders, particularly those from Brazil, Soviet Russia, and the Netherlands, played a conspicuous part in this advance, while Government orders stimulated sales in the domestic market, it is pointed out. Exports of rolled products are reported to have reached 225,111 tons in contrast with a trade of 123,151 tons in 1932, and shipments of cast iron pipe rose from 18,248 tons to 22,499 tons.

Barter agreements featured the Polish iron and steel export trade, the shipments of rails to Brazil being made in exchange for coffee; machinery and various rolled products went to Soviet Russia in exchange for fish and iron and manganese ores, while rails were sold in the Netherlands in exchange for tea and other Dutch Colonial products.

Trade in the Polish domestic market also showed gains in 1933. Government orders rose from 55,246 tons to 63,056 tons, private purchases of rolled products aggregated 294,807 tons in contrast with 241,076 tons in 1932, while there were 15,845 tons of cast iron pipe sold against 11,048 in the preceding year.

According to the Iron Mill Syndicate the prospects for 1934 are promising and there are indications that the number of workers employed, which averaged approximately 28,021 in 1933, will be increased considerably.

Continental Coal Freed Of Year's Receivership

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.). An order has been entered in the Marion County Circuit Court by Judge Charles G. Baker, of Morgantown, dissolving the year-old receivership of the Continental Coal Co., a Fairmont corporation operating mines in Marion and Monongalia Counties.

Under the order the company is turned back to its owners from Howard W. Showalter, of Fairmont, the reciever. During the receivership the company improved its finances to a marked extent, and a refinancing plan has been approved by the court under which the company can not default in its obligations for at least 15 years.

American Auto Train to Span Syrian Desert

An automotive train of American manufacture consisting of a 35-passenger semitrailer caravan coach and a 20-ton semitrailer freight car is soon to be placed in operation on the trans-Syrian desert route from Damascus to Bagdad, according to a report received in the Automotive Aeronautics Trade Division from Vice Consul George W. Renchard, Bagdad, Iraq.

The train will be powered by a six-cylinder Diesel engine of 185 brake horsepower and is expected to make the trip across the desert in 16 to 18 hours, compared with 10 days to two weeks formerly required to make the same trip by camel train, the vice consul reported.

The all-metal body of the coach is dust tight, insulated and measures 36 feet long, 9 feet wide and 11 feet high. First and second-class compartments are provided while meals and drinks will be served from the buffet while en route. The truck provides accommodation for nearly three tons of baggage or freight.

Early in 1923 the first convoy consisting of three American-built touring cars completed the 530-mile journey between Damascus and Bagdad in three days. In 1933, approximately 100 crossings of the Syrian desert were being made each week and practically all of the automobiles, buses and trucks used in the desert service are of American origin, according to the report.

Japan Crab Sales To U. S. Increase

Japanese exports of king crab to the United States in 1933 increased by 25 per cent compared with 1932, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner Donald W. Smith, Tokyo.

Total shipments to the American market in the last calendar year amounted to 155,000 cases against 122,517 cases during 1932. Japanese exports of king crab to the United Kingdom also increased in 1933, rising from a total of 111,552 cases in 1932 to 140,000 cases in the last calendar year.

The total 1933 canned crab-meat pack of Japanese king crab amounted to 310,832 cases (48 1-pound cans to the case), compared with 297,293 cases packed in 1932. Total export of canned crab from Japan during 1933 amounted to 397,000 cases, an increase of 86,000 cases compared with 1932. The 1933 shipments, the report points out, were the heaviest since 1929, when 399,433 cases were exported.

Rising Silver May Bring Embargo by Chinese

Shanghai, Feb. 20 (AP).—As a result of reports here that Washington intends to raise the price of silver, the Chinese government is rumored to be considering an embargo on silver shipments from China.

Chinese financial circles said they consider a higher silver price would not be favorable to China.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For)

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

EMPLOYES in the National Recovery Administration who have put in many hours of overtime work will receive leave to compensate them for this extra toil, according to the NRA Union.

BAKER.

Alvin Brown, executive officer of the NRA, says all employes are entitled to time off for their current overtime work. He invited the union to present facts concerning overtime being worked in the NRA.

Brown told the union executive committee that he assumes all other offices in the NRA will grant compensatory time off for overtime work. He added that no official notice to this effect has been made.

Brown's attention was brought to the plight of 84 workers in the Duplicating Division, who have been denied time off for work which they did under a promise that they would receive leave credit.

These workers have put in a total of 3,663 hours of overtime, ranging from 134½ to 2 each, between June and December. This division was under Commander Stevenson until December 11, when it was taken over by Samuel R. Kremer. Mr. Kremer promised leave for future overtime, but denied the employes any compensation for the time they worked before he came.

The union officials demanded that the workers be given time off for past as well as current overtime. Mr. Brown promised that this time would be allowed on an equitable basis.

NAMES of 154 persons were removed from the Civil Service reemployment register last week, leaving 2,858 remaining on the list, the first time the figure has gone below 3,000 in months, the commission announced yesterday.

No new names were added. In addition to the 154, there were 25 persons given temporary employment, making a total in this class of 322. Removals were accounted for as follows:

Probational appointments ..	4
Reinstated or shifted	92
Eligibility expired	5

C. L. S. (*), of AAA, comments on the epitaph regarding the miserly Jason Jones and submits another on Jason Jones of another branch of the Jones family. There are many Joneses, and this one named Jason was a charitable chap. Here's the new one:

Yes, Jason Jones—he skimped and saved
For children's home and chow.
He's gone; but we are sure he has
A crown upon his brow!

Several of the women employes at Tariff Commission are industriously practicing bowling. They are being coached by a member of the men's team, and it is expected they soon will be able to organize a regular team for league and match bowling. The usual attendance is 20 or more.

The Reefs of Distribution.

Honor-tricks alone are not sufficient to justify either an Opening bid, an Overcall or, least of all, a Takeout Double. The mere fact that a player holds four honor-tricks does not justify a Takeout Double if the distribution is unfavorable, nor does it justify reopening the bidding with a view to forcing a response from a partner who may be trickless when the opposing players have stopped at a low contract.

"An example of how much better it is to adopt a "wait and see" policy in such situations occurred in one of the championship pair matches of the Grand Nationals of the United States Bridge Association, held in New York in January. In this event I was playing with one of my favorite partners, Mr. Theodore A. Lightner, when the hand below was dealt:

South, Dealer.

	♠ Q J 8 2 ♡ 10 6 4 ◇ Q J 6 ♣ K 8 4 3
♠ A K 7 6 ♡ 9 3 2 ◇ A K 5 ♣ 9 7 2	N W E S	♠ 10 5 ♡ J 8 5 ◇ 9 8 4 2 ♣ J 10 6 5
	♠ 9 4 3 ♡ A K Q 7 ◇ 10 7 3 ♣ A Q 5

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass (1)	1NT (2)	Pass
Pass	Pass (3)

1—I held this hand. It is true I have four honor-tricks and a biddable spade suit, but the distribution is what I have often termed "hypocritical." It is 4-3-3-3 and there is only a fair prospect that I can develop five tricks with my hand, as at best I may be able to establish a low card in spades and there is not an even chance that this can be done. With such a type of hand there is a chance of defeating a high contract by the opponents, but there is an equally good change that, by bidding, you yourself may come to grief.

2—Of course, the natural response. North has 1½ honor-tricks and distribution as barren as my own.

3—If I was not strong enough to overcall at the range of one, certainly there is no distributional value in my hand that would cause me to feel more optimistic about it at this time. A Takeout Double at this point would be tantamount to a bid of two. I am sure that I can take 4 tricks against the adverse contract, my partner's hand may be trickless, and my pass will end the bidding. That I was fully justified in my seemingly conservative course was demonstrated when my opponents made not only their contract, but two overtricks for a total score, under Duplicate laws, of 150 points. It will be noted that there is no way by which the East and West hands can take more than four tricks if the contract is played at notrump.

At other tables where this watchful policy was not adopted, disasters of one kind or another overtook the East and West pairs. For instance, where Mr. Oswald Jacoby, South, was playing with Mr. David Burnstine, North, the bidding followed the same course on the first round, but when the player who held my cards saw the opponents stop at a bid of one notrump, he feared that this wily team was "putting something over" on him and his partner, and reopened the bidding with a Takeout Double. East responded with two clubs, Mr. Jacoby doubled, and East and West were set two tricks for a penalty of 500 points.

At other tables similar disasters overtook the West player who simply overcalled South's heart bid with one spade, as this also was doubled, and North and South took two trump tricks, three heart tricks, three club tricks and one diamond, defeating the one-spade contract 900 points.

Honor-tricks are very important in winning games at Contract Bridge, but when they are unaided by favorable distribution, it is just as well to be cautious; otherwise a player is apt to be sorry.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 8 5 ♡ K 9 ◇ A 10 4 ♣ K Q J 7 6 3
♠ Q 6 4 2 ♡ J 8 7 5 ◇ 7 3 2 ♣ 5 2	N W E S	♠ A J 9 7 3 ♡ 2 ◇ Q J 8 5 ♣ 10 9 8
	♠ K 10 ♡ A Q 10 6 4 3 ◇ K 9 6 ♣ A 4

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Walt Mason, Himself

Uses of Adversity.

I used to spend my time admiring the valorous financial knight who went ahead, with zeal untiring, to gather all the wealth in sight. He seemed to have a soul undaunted, he bucked the market every day, and nailed down everything he wanted, and let no smackers get away. His front was bold and high and lofty, and with a firm and ruthless hand he trimmed the sucker and the softy, and kept his assets safely canned. I saw him thus when he was winning, and all things seemed to come out right; then he was jubilant and grinning, he was refreshing to the sight. But when all things began to crumble, and fortunes shriveled up and shrunk, this once proud knight looked pretty humble, bewailing every missing plunk. I had a lot of worthy neighbors who'd saved some little wads of kale, and saw this outcome of their labors go off like leaves upon the gale. Right valiantly they took their bitters and, said, "We still have hands and feet, and while we dwell with human critters we'll surely earn enough to eat. The country's full of just such mortals who met misfortune with a smile, and if they reached the poorhouse portals they gamboled up the northeast aisle. The bitter wailing and the cursing comes from the plumed and armored knight, who is in noisy sorrow nursing the wounds encountered in the fight.

"It Happened One Night" Previewed by Press—New Warner Features Announced

Breezy Comedy Offers Lively Entertainment

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

When Samuel Hopkins Adams wrote his original story for a popular magazine, he called it, if memory serves—and there have been times when it hasn't—"Night Bus." That wasn't too good a title for this tale, either.

But all this does not in the least alter the fact that "It Happened One Night," accorded a preview screening in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday noon for the benefit of the dramatic desks and a few visiting firemen and their ladies, is a thoroughly entertaining picture in which Clark Gable does the best work he has ever brought to the screen, in the estimation of this column, and Claudette Colbert, likewise, is both amusing and charming in a manner that is rather more ingenuous than usual for her.

Sticks to Original.

The story is, perhaps, a little too long drawn out for best effect, but it is so diverting in character, so varied in scene and development and adheres so tenaciously to the original magazine version that it may be unconditionally recommended as enlivening entertainment, unblemished by any indelicate suggestion, either in speech or action. It might very easily have been converted into a thoroughly risque recital of questionable relationships had not Columbia and the cast so scrupulously maintained a high level of naturalness, plausibility and discretion.

Many, no doubt, will recall the fable as Samuel Hopkins Adams' agreeable revelation of what might conceivably happen if a young heiress, attempting to elude a distasteful domestic situation, escaped from her father's yacht, embarked on a bus in Miami for New York and en route was forced to throw herself upon the resourcefulness and honorable intentions of a young newspaper man, intent on getting a "scoop" story and having himself quite a time, in addition.

Clever Comedy.

Most of the action relates to the difficulties encountered in evading the irate father's dragnet thrown out for the apprehension of his daughter and at the same time getting to New York without the aid of funds or any certain means of conveyance. There are many clever comedy touches, a deal of suspense and a denouement that is as keenly humorous as it is unexpected, in the screen version of the yarn.

This is the first instance in recollection when Clark Gable ever contrived to create a sustained character study in which, at one time or another, he did not convey an inescapable sense of "acting." In this assignment he is utterly natural and proportionately more effective than he has ever been before. Miss Colbert is no less to be congratulated upon a performance of exceptional attractiveness.

The supporting cast is made up of such reliable players as Walter Connolly, as the father; Roscoe Karns, as a fresh passenger on the bus; Alan Hale, who seems to be coming back to his former prominence in a succession of excellent "bit" parts; Jameson Thomas, as the society groom who doesn't quite rate the bride; Arthur Hoyt, Blanche Friderici, Harry Bradley, Maidel Turner and numerous others.

Ace Holiday Fare.

It would be difficult to hit upon a happier subject for a holiday midnight preview than this—an honor that is to be bestowed upon "It Happened One Night," when it is given its world premiere at RKO-Keith's tomorrow night.

This will be a world premiere by no more than an eyelash, by the way. The National release of this picture will be observed throughout the country on Washington's Birthday, which is by way of being a National holiday and one of the best days of the theatrical season, along with Labor Day, Thanksgiving and New Year's.

Through inadvertence, incomplete information was provided in the report carried on Sunday morning with regard to the individual awards in the eighth annual District of Columbia one-act play tournament which came to end last Saturday night. Individual awards for the best acting developed by the tournament were awarded jointly to Miss Katherine L. Vaux and Mrs. Blanche M. Foote. Miss Vaux's share in the award was unintentionally omitted from mention of the winners. Both Miss Vaux and Mrs. Foote were members of the cast of the Women's City Club Drama Unit, whose entry in the tournament was "The Rescue," by Creighton Smith, directed by Edith Sears.

A Local Coup.

It comes to the notice of this department that Constance Connor Brown, director of Cue and Curtain, the dramatic organization of George Washington University, scored a "scoop" when she secured "Three-Cornered Moon" for presentation by that group of players on March 1 and 2, at 8:30 p. m., in Wardman Park Theater.

The play, which was released for amateur production on January 15, was secured from an advance reading of the publisher's lists the last week in December. As a result of this enterprise on the part of Miss Brown, the play will be seen here less than a year after its Broadway premiere.

Washington saw the motion picture version of the comedy in October, but the Cue and Curtain production will be in its first local presentation as a living drama.

Back on Perch as Matinee Idol

In the role of Peter Warne, in Columbia's production of "It Happened One Night"—which it didn't do at all—Clark Gable does the best work of his career, opposite Claudette Colbert. Miss Colbert, incidentally, is not so bad on her own account. "It Happened One Night" is the film version of Samuel Hopkins Adams' story of "Night Bus." It will be given its world premier at RKO-Keith's tomorrow midnight.

It wasn't so many years ago when Alice Lake was one of the leading stars of the screen. Many will recall her stellar appearances at the Metropolitan in "Lombardi, Ltd.," "Shore Acres" and many other films of the first rank in the old days of the silents. Now, by dint of hard work in a succession of assignments as an "extra," Miss Lake has started on the long trail back to eminence. Her start was a matter of a 12-cent investment. When prosperity was still around that corner, she bought 12 penny postcards, published by your Uncle Sam. She addressed them to a group of directors who had held the megaphone during the period in which she had starred in more than 100 pictures. "Dear——" the card said, "please ask your assistant to keep me in mind." It worked. Miss Lake will be discernible in a "bit" with George Raft and Carole Lombard in "Bolero," opening at the Earle on Friday.

On the Horizon.

With contracts signed, release dates set and on his desk, John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, yesterday announced a list of new screen attractions to be shown during the ensuing months at the Warner Brothers theaters in the Capital. These pictures, Mr. Payette declares, represent the finest entertainment values that have come along in many seasons.

Heading the list, and scheduled for an early prerelease world premiere showing in Washington is "Wonder Bar," said by preview audiences on the coast to top the greatest picture ever made. The cast, as was the stage roster when the play was presented on the boards, is headed by Al Jolson and also includes Kay Francis, Dick Powell, Dolores Del Rio, Ricardo Cortez, Hal LeRoy, Guy Kibbee, Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly, Fifi D'Orsay and battalions of others whose names comprise a blue book of the show world.

Advance notices of "Wonder Bar" say something about 1,000 scenes—which seems like quite a good many—a congress of superstars, beautiful girls, dancers, choristers, specialty artists and the like.

Also Imminent.

Other attractions soon to be shown, but not listed in the order of their release are: "The Ninth Guest," the Broadway stage success by Owen Davis, which has sent shivers up the backs of hundreds of New York audiences during the past two years.

"Dark Hazard," a picturization of the famous Book of the Month Club novel by W. R. Burnett, with Edward G. Robinson and Genevieve Tobin in the featured roles.

"Bolero," presenting George Raft in a role that fits him perfectly, that of a romantic and adventurous fellow who climbs to success on a ladder of women's hearts. The dance numbers are woven around Maurice Ravel's internationally famous musical composition, "Bolero." Carole Lombard and Sally Rand, the famous fan dancer, are featured.

"Long Lost Father," a new John Barrymore starring vehicle in which Mr. Barrymore has the role of a prodigal parent who tries to regain the love of a daughter he deserted. Helen Chandler and Donald Cook head the supporting cast.

"In addition to these exceptionally strong film attractions," stated Mr. Payette, "there will be other films which are now in production, and on which there have been no release dates set as yet. The Warner houses also will present the foremost productions of independent producers from time to time, insuring a steady flow of product of the first rank.

Cuffed Around!

Quarrels over a laundry bill and his wife's preference for a singing career rather than marriage were cited last week-end in a divorce action Charlie J. Foy, son of the late Eddie Foy, brought against Grace Hayes, former musical comedy star.

"She ordered me to get out of the house and stay out," declared Mr. Foy.

But it was probably the part about the laundry bill that took the starch out of him!

Hey-Hayes!

$50 and Gas Taken At Filling Station

Attendant Bound, Gagged Near Chatham.

Danville, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.). Local police are aiding the Pittsylvania County authorities in seeking two men who held up Ellyson's filling station a mile north of Chatham and escaped with $50 after filling the gasoline tank of their car.

While the two men covered him, one with a sawed-off shotgun, he was backed into the station, tied and gagged. The thieves then emptied the cash register.

The robbery was not discovered until another motorist sought gasoline and found the attendant tied up.

Miss Margaret Allison Weds.

Danville, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Announcement has been made here of the marriage here of Miss Margaret Lea Allison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Allison, of Caswell County, N. C., to Julian J. Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Crane, by the Rev. W. W. Trent last Friday.

By Nelson B. Bell.

By a shrewd application of that keen sense of showmanship and box-office acumen that has placed it in the forefront of America's most reliable and most sagacious play producers, the Theater Guild has transformed a creaky and outmoded Seventeenth Century comedy into an evening of delightful Twentieth Century entertainment.

That is to say, the Theater Guild has been sufficiently alert to current tastes to apprehend the unique charm with which Arthur Guiterman and Lawrence Langner, aided by the musical contributions of Edmond W. Rickett, have imbued Moliere's "The School for Husbands" by translating the stilted couplets of the "father of French comedy" into the brash and breezy vernacular of the present day, and so have sent on tour this unique attraction which brings to a brilliant close the subscription season of six plays offered by the American Theater Society of Washington.

Rejuvenated by Treatment.

"The School for Husbands," unadorned by the distinctive humor with which the Messrs. Guiterman and Langner have enlivened their clever rhyming, would be of a piece with such whimsical stories of love's inveterate impediments as are encountered, for example, in the book of Strauss' "Die Fledermaus," or the libretti of any of the old Offenbach operettas. Tricked out with the spacious humor of its present treatment, graced with music either especially composed by Mr. Rickett or adapted by him from the quaint old melodies of the Seventeenth Century, and set off by Lee Simonson's delicately executed settings and exquisite pastel costumes, however, it becomes a work of a totally different hue, graceful, lilting, interesting and witty.

The dramatic structure is one of few complexities. Two brothers find themselves the unwitting guardians of two charming sisters. By the terms of their father's will, Leonor and Isabelle must marry either bridegrooms of their guardians' choosing, or their guardians' themselves. Sganarelle and Ariste approach their responsibilities from precisely opposite points of view, Ariste, in love with Leonor, permits his betrothed every liberty of thought and action; Sganarelle exercises a rigid and watchful discipline, making his charge a virtual prisoner. Valere, the young dandy living in the house just across the narrow Paris street, is the beneficiary of this inquisitorial isolation through a clever ruse planned and deftly put in operation by Isabelle. And that is all there is to the story, in substance or suggestion.

Slender Plot Bolstered.

The plot, at best, is both attenuated and antedated. It would hardly suffice for a full evening's diversion had not a bit of appropriate choreography been interpolated from another Moliere play as a second-act dream sequence in which Sganarelle is forewarned of the incongruity of his prospective marriage to a young girl half his age. This "Le Marriage Force," led by Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman, constitutes the complete content of the second act and forms an expressive and amusing interlude between the two major movements of the play's principal events.

By an adroit device of raising and lowering the walls of the houses facing on the single Paris street where all of the action of the drama takes place, the necessity of changing scenes is avoided. By this convenient conceit, also, the introduction of "asides" is made possible to the considerable humorous advantage of the comedy.

The songs and ensembles, all agreeably sung, although without the revelation of any voice of note, provide other pleasant respites in the progress of incidents which in themselves might otherwise lose something of their present tang. Variety is lent the dozen or so musical numbers in the two acts and ballet by presenting them as solos, duets, madrigals and ensembles with quite the conventional formality of opera bouffe.

Simonson's Artistry.

It is in these musical moments of the play that the artistry of Lee Simonson is most entrancingly emphasized. With the blending of costumes and accessories in the daintiest of pastel tints, he has created a series of stage pictures that are as delicately and shimmeringly lovely as fragile groups of rare old Dresden china.

The Guild has been particularly happy in its selection of principals to whom to intrust the variegated cadences of the tricky modern measures into which Mr. Guiterman and Mr. Langner have translated Moliere's simpler original verse. Osgood Perkins, an admirable actor who always gives an excellent account of himself in whatever dramatic situation he may be placed, is sly, scheming, droll and stupid, by turns, in his flawless impersonation of Sganarelle, the role created 300 years ago by the author. Opposite him, as Isabelle, is the ingenuous and utterly capable Miss June Walker, with Stuart Casey and Joan Carr scarcely less efficient as Ariste and Leonor.

In Comedy Roles.

James Jolley and Flora Le Breton account finely for the comedy parts of man's man and lady's maid, and Parker Steward discloses the best voice in the company, as Valere, the serenading Lothario whose suit is finally crowned with a gay triumph of sly circumlocution over stolid circumstance.

Scores more, whose names are listed in the small-type paragraph preceding these cursory midnight comments, contribute generously and competently to the novelty and charm of a performance that elicited the enthusiastic acclaim of last night's distinguished capacity audience as an evening of unaccustomed refreshment in the theater.

Opinion Sanctions Tax on Insurance

Bill in Virginia Assembly Held Constitutional.

Richmond, Feb. 20 (AP).—Assistant Attorney General Edwin H. Gibson in an opinion has held as constitutional the Weaver bill, allowing counties and towns to levy a 2 per cent tax on the gross receipts of fire insurance companies doing business in those localities, for the benefit of firemen injured in line of duty.

A similar law was declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court of Appeals two years ago because the money was collectable by the State treasurer and payable by him to the local firemen.

Under the Weaver bill, now in the hands of a Senate sub-committee, each locality is empowered to levy the tax separately, and the State takes no part in the transaction.

Two Norfolk Shootings Laid To Hush Plot

Efforts to Silence Holdup Witness Blamed; One Victim May Die.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Believing Charles Lilley and Linewood Whittaker, who were shot while they slept, were victims of a plot, perhaps by gangsters, police of Portsmouth and Norfolk County today claimed they have several clews. They said there were several suspects.

Lilley was to have appeared as a witness in the highway robbery case in which Myer "Jake" Jacobson, was the victim. Jacobson was held up in front of his home in Portsmouth by several men. He opened fire and killed Carl D. Richardson. Laverne Bass, one of the bandits pleaded guilty in the holdup and is now facing eight years in prison.

Lilley told police he knew who took part in the holdup, and police believe persons interested in preventing him from testifying may have tried to kill him.

Lilley and Whittaker were asleep in a barbecue stand Sunday night when they were shot from a window. Lilley has a bullet in his spine and is not expected to recover. Whittaker was shot three times, but none of the wounds are considered serious.

Virginia Foxes to Get New Blood From Iowa

Richmond, Feb. 20 (AP).—Carl Nolting announced today that A. C. Willford, a member of Congress from the Third Iowa District, was sending him an Iowa red fox for breeding purposes.

Willford said the Iowa fox was capable of running hundreds of miles before being caught. The fox will be released at an undisclosed place in Virginia for the purpose of giving new blood to the Virginia reynard.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 20 (AP).—Eleven workmen and two firemen were painfully burned yesterday at the city rock quarry when two barrels of asphalt became ignited and exploded.

The men were heating the barrels. One barrel was hurled 150 feet. The other was blown out of sight. Russell Hott, one of the workmen, may lose his eyesight.

Virginia Lumbermen Elect Herring, Young

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—George W. Herring, of Woodridge, was elected president of the Virginia Lumber and Building Supply Dealers Association at its closing session in Richmond.

Edgar M. Young, of Fredericksburg, was named a director.

Hospital Patient Takes 'Time Out'

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—Russell Snelson entered the King's Daughters' Hospital Sunday night for an operation.

Monday morning the nurse went to Snelson's bed to prepare him for the operation, but he was nowhere to be found. An alarm was sounded. Late that evening he returned.

"I thought of something I had to do," he explained, "so I just got up, dressed, and went and did it."

Oil Men Predict High Gas Revenue

Take Issue With Virginia Highways Head.

Richmond, Feb. 20 (AP).—Representatives of the oil industry in Virginia yesterday said estimated receipts from gasoline taxes and automobile licenses, as reflected in former Gov. Pollard's budget, will be exceeded by more than $3,000,000 due to a sharp upturn in business.

The statement was made by W. C. Litterer, chairman, and W. H. Ray, vice chairman of the committee representing the oil industry in Virginia. Their joint statement took sharp issue with State Highway Commissioner Shirley as to the funds expected to be available for road construction.

Litterer and Ray were to appear before Assembly roads committees today to urge support of a bill reducing the gas tax from 5 cents per gallon to 4 cents.

Father Gets $700 In Death of Girl

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—A jury in Shenandoah County Circuit Court has awarded $700 to L. M. Winesburg, administrator of Esther Winesburg, his daughter, against Harry Abrams, of Washington, in a damage suit which sought to collect $10,000 from Abrams as a result of the girl's death in an auto accident.

Gaylord Good, of Edinburg County, driver of the car in which Miss Winesburg and her sister, Miss Mabel Winesburg, were riding, was a joint defendant in the suit with Abrams. No damages were assessed against Good.

Miss Mabel Winesburg also was fatally injured in the same accident, October 12, 1932.

State Planning Bridge Across Rappahannock

Would Replace Free Span Now Declared in Bad Condition.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 20 (AP).—A new bridge across the Rappahannock River between Fredericksburg and Falmouth to replace the present "free bridge" was understood today to be under consideration by the State highway department.

George W. Herring, after a conference with Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, said the highway department regards the present bridge between Fredericksburg and Stafford as "in a very bad condition" and considered it unsafe to adjoin a walkway to it.

The new bridge would be constructed with PWA funds at a cost of $150,000, supporters of the movement said.

Mr. Herring conferred with Commissioner Shirley after receiving a resolution passed by the Stafford County Board of Supervisors asking that the walkwa, be added.

In the event the money can not be obtained, a swing walkway paralleling the present bridge was suggested.

Waynesboro Begins War On 100 Evaders of Fines

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 20 (Spl.).—More than 100 warrants have been issued here by Judge A. C. Kimler providing for the rearrest of persons convicted and fined in the city court who have failed to pay fines assessed against them. More than $2,000 in back fines is due the city.

In connection with this move, A. R. Main was appointed clerk of the city court. Heretofore no definite system of recording or collecting fines has been used.
